Vegetation along banks of river key to erosion control, study says

By ROBERT MISKIMON

KEY TO THE control of riverbank erosion on the Carmel River may be re-establishment of healthy riparian vegetation, according to a $15,000 geologic study conducted for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Steady loss of riverbank vegetation over the last 15 years was pinpointed in the study as one of the major causes of erosion. Either the water management district or individual property owners in Carmel Valley should start a program of replanting, the study recommends.

This assertion undoubtedly will fuel the controversy over what effect — if any — the loss of riparian vegetation has on riverbank erosion, and what connection exists between pumping of the groundwater table and the loss of river plant life.

Robert Curry, the geohydrologist who performed the study for the water management district, suggested a causative link between the lowering of the water table and the destruction of riparian vegetation.

'Cause of bank erosion and channel widening in the past 15 years, accelerating in the past four years, is related entirely to loss of bank vegetation," the report concludes. "The ultimate cause of the vegetation loss (is) a combination of low river flows, induced by drought and management of upstream dams, and extensive groundwater pumping by stream-side wells."

Focus of the study was Carmel River sedimentation and its role in riverbank erosion, as well as identification of causes of river channel instability and recommendations for river management.

Curry examined historical records for the Carmel River which date to 1858, as well as photographs, maps, and charts to determine changes in the river caused by sedimentation and erosion.

THE NATURAL CYCLE of sedimentation and erosion of the Carmel River was disrupted by the construction of dams in the 1920s, which cut off about half of the riverbed sediment normally deposited from the 125 square mile Carmel River watershed.

"Following dam construction, the equilibrium between sediment supply from the mountains and water supply to transport that sediment was broken," the report states.

Causes of recent channel widening and bank erosion include fire control, effects of drought, groundwater pumping, urbanization, channel manipulation and climatic changes.

"The base cause of the fundamental channel changes in the past 60 years is a decrease in sediment supply due to dam construction and fire suppression. Bank erosion in the past 15 years has been largely associated with loss of bank stability in local sites.

"Cause of bank instability can be attributed to loss of bank cohesion through loss of vegetative cover," Curry concluded. "When banks erode, trees and other bank materials are added to the channel, impeding flow and deflecting current into the banks, creating greater erosion.

"Once sediment in considerable quantities is added to a channel during periods of moderate or small floods, that sediment itself causes channel aggradation, increasing channel roughness and causing even more bank erosion."

'Managing bank vegetation by planting it, nurturing it, and keeping it in place is the most cost-effective way to stabilize a widening channel.'

Sedimentation has been recognized as a serious problem associated with flooding and erosion on the Carmel River, although no government agencies — including the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District — has funds to clear the river channel.

Carmel River Watch recently asked Fort Ord Army engineers to clear river siltation as a community service, but that organization's efforts were blocked by protests from the Operating Engineers Union, Local No. 3. The union objected because it felt the project would deny its members work.

SEVERAL POSSIBLE schemes for replanting riparian vegetation to control sedimentation and erosion were suggested by Curry:

•Allow individual landowners along the Carmel River to assume responsibility for planting and maintenance of channel banks, with advice and assistance from the flood control district or the water management agency.

•Implement a bank re-vegetation project sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, concentrating efforts on those areas of the Carmel River without sufficient protective cover.

•Develop a bank stabilization program with government assistance, and use stream-side distribution pipes to irrigate riparian vegetation from the California-American Water Co. wells.

"Managing bank vegetation by planting it, nurturing it, and keeping it in place is the most cost-effective way to stabilize a widening channel," the Curry study concludes. "Bank vegetation also has considerable other benefits. It shades stream-side portions of the river during seasonal higher flows, providing cooler microsites for fish.

"Riparian vegetation evaporates moisture,

Flood control alternatives may cost less

FLOOD CONTROL measures for the lower Carmel River may cost less than originally estimated.

Final calculations in an $18,000 flood hazard study just prepared by George S. Nolte and Associates for the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District are somewhat less than those in a draft report filed in May.

The study proposes five alternatives for flood control, from construction of six-foot-deep concrete culverts to reinforcement of levees along the river channel.

Creation of a special assessment district to tax property owners in the floodplain area is recommended to finance the flood control measures decided upon by property owners and county officials.

The area studied in the report is the reach of the Carmel River from its mouth to the western end of the Rancho Canada Golf Club, 11,000 feet upstream. The area includes commercial and residential areas east and west of Highway 1 with high potential flood damage.

Once flood control measures are adopted and implemented for the lower Carmel River floodplain, federal flood insurance coverage limits can be increased. No action to implement any of the recommendations in the Nolte study would be taken by the Board of Supervisors before public hearings are held. They are tentatively scheduled for December.

Until flood hazard mitigation measures are in effect, Monterey County may be ineligible for federal disaster relief in the event of major floods on the Carmel River.

•One alternative proposed in the Nolte study is protection of the north Carmel River bank and adjacent developed areas by construction of an improved levee from Val Verde Way to Rio Road. The initial draft report estimated cost of this alternative at $1.45 million, but the final estimate has been reduced to $1.22 million.

Initial estimate of operating and 25-year amortization costs for this alternative was $203,000 per year, but that has been scaled down to $171,000 per year.

•Another proposal for the construction of a bypass channel in the center of the riverbed from the southern edge of the mouth, winding near the sewage treatment plant and ending near the Highway 1 bridge was estimated at $2.41 million. Revised estimate is $2.18 million.

Operating and amortization expenses for this option have been estimated at $305,000 annually instead of the initial $347,000.

•A third proposal in the Nolte study was for bridge improvements on the Highway 1 overpass to raise the level of the bridge to allow major flood waters to pass without washing out the bridge. That alternative was originally estimated to cost $4.64 million; the estimate has been reduced to $4.41 million.

Annual estimated cost of operations and amortization for the bridge improvement has likewise been reduced from $561,000 to $531,000.

•Placement of landfill on the southern edge of the Carmel River to buttress the channel, while adding reinforcement to the north bank levee was another proposal in the Nolte study. Initial estimate of the cost of this alternative was $3.05 million, which has been lowered to $2.82 million in the final report.

Operating and amortization costs for this alternative, originally estimated at $378,000 per year, are now estimated at $347,000 per year.

•An alternative to the above proposal involves substitutions of a setback levee for the landfill in the floodway boundary. Original estimate of cost for this plan was $1.7 million; final estimate is $1.5 million. Estimated operating costs have been reduced from $238,000 annually to $208,000.

•Construction of concrete culverts along the existing road embankment near Highway 1 to control flood flow, the final proposal in the Nolte study, was estimated at $4.39 million initially. That figure has now been scaled down to $4.16 million.

Annual operating and amortization costs for the concrete culvert proposal are now estimated at $495,000, instead of the original $526,000.

Costs of the alternatives are only estimates and do not include costs for either land acquisition or right-of-way, said Robert Smith of the flood control district. All of the proposals fall within the sphere of the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program and are subject to review and approval by the coastal commission and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

thus locally cooling the central valley and enhancing an oasis effect on hot days. Stream-side vegetation provides many habitats for avifauna and small animals."

To maintain artificially-planted riparian vegetation, an injection irrigation system should be developed for use during dry periods. The system involves a drip nozzle inserted into an open, perforated well casing to provide water for the river plants, Curry suggests.

With an adequate surface and groundwater management plan, the newly-planted riparian vegetation could be maintained with no irrigation, according to the study. "Groundwater withdrawals can be timed and spaced so as to minimize local drawdown along water courses, and recharge can be enhanced."

ALTHOUGH THE Curry analysis supports the position of the recent environmental impact report on the Carmel Valley Master Plan regarding riparian vegetation, it flies in the face of arguments that there is no connection between groundwater pumping and the loss of river plant life.

The Valley Master Plan EIR prepared by Sedway-Cooke of San Francisco noted that erosion and sedimentation of the Carmel River is "accelerated by the destruction of riparian vegetation essential to the maintenance of soil stability along the riverbanks.

"The loss of riparian vegetation results when the water table drops below the root systems," according to the EIR. "The major cause of this increased drawdown has been the high-volume pumping by water extraction companies whose wells are located near the river.

"The failure of vegetation cover along the river has caused severe bank erosion, particularly in the mid-Valley area. The resulting sedimentation of the river increases turbidity, degrading water quality and endangering the habitat for fish and the organisms on which they feed."

That statement was vigorously challenged by California-American Water Co. during the public review process on the EIR. The issue is also a subject of pending litigation between Cal-Am and several property owners along the Carmel River in the vicinity of the Cal-Am Manor Well.

Leonard Weiss, attorney for Cal-Am, wrote to the Monterey County Planning Department that the portion of the EIR which deals with water table drawdown and riparian vegetation contains assertions "without any evidence (of) the existence of a correlation between water table drawdown, riparian vegetation and streambank erosion.

"To my knowledge, there is simply no evidence whatsoever to support such an asserted correlation and none is cited anywhere in the text of the draft EIR. This is indeed a complex subject of substantial dispute and their statements on the subject are their own opinions and are not supported by the evidence," the Cal-Am attorney stated.

The Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments recently called on the county planning department to require erosion control plans as part of the building permit process for projects along the Carmel River.

Such erosion control plans should include provisions for keeping all sediment onsite as well as re-vegetation measures along the river, AMBAG suggested in response to the Valley Master Plan EIR.

Choice of the proper plants, as well as use of proper watering procedures, is crucial to establishment of a healthy streambank plant community, Curry suggests in his study. Unless year-round watering is planned, developing plants should not be watered except at times of drought which drop out the top 20 feet of the aquifer under the channel.

"Riparian vegetation draws water directly from the channel during times of high flow, and from bank storage for a period of time after high flows when banks are recharged," Curry found. "When both bank storage and channel water is gone, successful riparian vegetation will make use of deeper water below the groundwater table, at a level lower than the streambed. Successful vegetation will have roots in three places to take advantage of these three sources of water."

EROSION of the river banks along the Carmel River has contributed to the loss of riparian vegetation — which stabilizes the river channel — and to siltation in the riverbed about 100 yards above Schulte Road bridge. Alan McEwen photo

City mulls annexation

By BABS COROVESSIS

"HERE WAS THE City Council's opportunity to participate in something in behalf of Carmel citizens, and we blew it," City Councilman Mike Brown declared last week.

He spoke after the Carmel City Council voted 3 to 2 against joining in a lawsuit that involves cities in forced annexation situations.

The topic of "annexation" generated quite a bit of discussion. It prompted Brown to say that the city's failure to join in the suit "was a slap in the face of Carmel citizens."

City Attorney George Brehmer had recommended to the council that it consider joining in the suit, Citizens Against Forced Annexation versus LAFCO (Local Agency Formation Commission) in Los Angeles County, as a friend of the court.

"It is an issue which the city has expressed interest in in the past," Brehmer said. He added that the issue before the Supreme Court will be to determine whether or not cities to which territories are proposed for annexation have the right to vote on the annexation.

Despite a long discussion, the vote to join in the lawsuit failed. Only Mayor Barney Laiolo and Councilman Mike Brown voted in favor of the motion to join the suit. Councilmen Howard Brunn, Frank Lloyd and Councilwoman Helen Arnold opposed.

"The issue is: Do the citizens of the city have a right to vote on any proposed annexation?" Brehmer said.

"I've always been outspoken on that one. You know that residents should have been able to participate in the last election particularly," Brown said.

BREHMER observed that in the last annexation election, if all four outside land areas had remained as part of the election, Carmel residents would have been able to vote. (The four areas were Carmel Point, Mission Fields, Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods.)

"Great opposition arose and Carmel Point was cut out," Brehmer added. Even with Carmel Point deleted by LAFCO, Brehmer noted that still was sufficient population outside the territory in excess of 50 percent of Carmel's population. However, LAFCO then eliminated Mission Fields from the annexation vote, reducing the territorial population to a level where Carmel voters could not vote on the issue, Brehmer recalled.

"LAFCO, in such situations, can force annexation by cutting territories down into small pieces or increments which prohibit the cities from having a vote," Brehmer pointed out.

Councilman Brown commented after the meeting that he felt Lloyd, Brunn and Mrs. Arnold "failed to look at the issue. They favored annexation before and were afraid this suit would limit annexation."

Brown added that annexation questions have to be looked at separately. "I'm not against some anexations, but I'm not in favor of massive ones," Brown said.

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Doug Peterson told the council of the case on appeal: "The Appeals Court said people inside the city didn't have any right to vote. They said the protection was more important to the people who were going to get annexed into the city than those already in the city. They also felt the 50 percent level was sufficient protection — and that's why it is being appealed," Peterson said.

"The Appeals Court held the law is valid as it stands — that citizens of the city to which the territory is being annexed do not have the right to vote unless the population of the area to be annexed is 50 percent or greater than the city, or has a valuation 50 percent or greater than the territory," said Brehmer.

Brunn noted: "When the county wants to unload a bunch of these special districts, they can do it under current law, but couldn't if it were changed."

Mayor Laiolo said that citizens should have the right to say whether they do or don't want the annexation. "It can be either way, but they should at least get to vote. That's what annoys me."

Brunn commented that the county "can sit there and allow all these developments and projects to go on and say, 'My God, look at the burden of servicing these areas.' And then they decide to just dump them on the city," Brunn added.

However, the councilman did not want to join in the lawsuit because "I'm not sure I clearly understand it. I'm sure it's a long, complicated thing," he added.

Councilman Brown noted that if the council looked at the last annexation attempt in Carmel "it can muddy our thoughts."

Brown asserted that the existing law allows counties to tell cities "that you will now have to take on the burdens of those areas the county has developed and allowed to grow into a mess. And now you people (the city) can bail us out and we'll dump our problems on you."

Brown, referring to Brunn's remarks about natural boundaries for Carmel, said. 'How can you say a highway is natural?'

Piecemeal growth forced on cities makes them grow in ways they do not want to grow, Brown said. "It's unfair and unreasonable."

Brunn said he felt the benefit of Carmel would be to retain its "natural boundaries" — Highway 1 to Carmel River to Pescadero Canyon.

"If you feel the people of Carmel would be supportive of that issue, then abstain," City Attorney Doug Peterson said.

Brunn said he was concerned that dollars will dictate what gets annexed or left to the county.

"All you have to do is tell the county you'd like to annex the (Carmel) Rancho (area) and the Carmel Center and you'd have another story trying to get that piece of land," Laiolo laughed.

Brown, referring to Brunn's remarks about "natural boundaries for Carmel," said: "How can you say a highway is natural?"

VOTERS OUTSIDE Carmel rejected the last annexation attempt in November, 1979.

Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods voters voted 555-453 against annexation.

According to Francis (Skip) Lloyd, one of the annexation leaders in 1979, "There is still a lot of interest. It didn't lose by much, and all the arguments we made turned out to be correct.

"The interest in annexation is still there, but there is nobody to be a leader right now. It took a lot of time and work. Somebody has to expend the time and organize it," Lloyd added.

He pointed out that if the areas just outside Carmel were now annexed "all those numerous neighborhood issues that come up could be handled better by the city of Carmel than the Board of Supervisors in Salinas."

Lloyd named several controversial issues: the Mission Ranch; expansion of Carmel River Inn; and problems with Carmel Point beach area and fences.

He said the arguments by the pro-annexation forces "have turned out to be correct."

"We argued that taxes would not change, and they haven't; we argued people would have more responsive representation here than in Salinas, and we predicted Service Area 43 would try to charge user fees, which they have twice and have been opposed," Lloyd stated.

Lloyd felt more confident annexation would pass next time around because one controversial issue no longer is active in Carmel politics: former Mayor Gunnar Norberg and his majority on the City Council. Asked if the Norberg administration played a part in defeating annexation, Lloyd said, "it sure did."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold made similar remarks in 1979 after the election.

Like Councilman Brunn, she too favors Carmel reaching its natural boundaries. She still favors annexation, but adds, "the impetus has to come from the residents outside Carmel."

Her remarks about the council administration back two years was, "Those people (outside the city) don't want to be governed the way this city is run."

The annexation question cannot appear on the November ballot this year, since filing must take place 120 days before the election.

Planners say bad subdivision plans should not be reviewed

PROPOSED SUBDIVISION maps clearly in conflict with zoning laws should be denied, the Monterey County Planning Commission has decided.

Commissioners voted unanimously to recommend that the Board of Supervisors adopt an amendment to the subdivision ordinance to allow the county to reject such maps.

The amendment would also permit the planning commission to refuse to order preparation of environmental impact reports for such projects. The measure now goes to the supervisors for possible adoption. Sept. 8.

"Neither the planning commission nor the supervisors can refuse to accept a preliminary subdivision map or to order an EIR unless the proposal is clearly contrary to law," explained deputy county counsel Jose Ramos.

"The amendment allows refusal when the subdivision map is inconsistent either with the general plan or with zoning ordinances. It also allows the planning commission to decide if an EIR is required for a preliminary subdivision map. It would only go to the Board of Supervisors on appeal."

Supervisors directed preparation of the amendment on the motion of Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley after the board ordered an EIR June 9 for the proposed Carmel Valley Airport condominium project.

The board had rejected an EIR for the project last February, but the county counsel's office ruled that denial improper and said the board was obligated to comply with the developer's request for an EIR. The condo project was opposed by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, the Regional Water Quality Control Board, and the Monterey County Planning Commission.

That project envisions 110 condominium units on land which is zoned for only 30 units.

"What effect will this amendment have on persons with property that's inconsistent with the general plan who wants an amendment to the plan?" asked Commissioner Peter Cailotto. "Can we still turn him down?"

"Any subdivision map or EIR would have to be preceded by the amendment to the plan," Ramos answered.

"This gets to the question of saying, 'This is so outrageous we won't consider it,' " remarked Commissioner Joseph Sullivan.

Jack Sassard, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, spoke in favor of the amendment.

"The decision for an EIR June 9 on the airport condominiums was a bad decision," Sassard told the planning commission. "The supervisors were put in the embarrassing position of requiring an EIR for a developer who, by his own admission, didn't even have a plan."

The amendment would require consideration by the subdivision committee of the planning commission of all subdivision maps for consistency with applicable zoning and planning guidelines and laws.

If a negative declaration of environmental impact by the planning staff is accepted by the planning commission, it may receive the subdivision map.

But if the subdivision committee finds that the proposed subdivision is inconsistent with zoning and planning laws, the planning commission may refuse to consider it. Based on the initial study of the subdivision map by the subdivision committee, the planning commission may require preparation of an EIR for the project.

Decision of the planning commission on any preliminary map or EIR may be appealed to the board of supervisors, under the proposed amendment. But the scope of that appeal is limited:

"The subject of the appeal shall be strictly limited to the impartiality or correctness of the decision made by the planning commission; for example, whether the proposed preliminary map is inconsistent with the general plan or whether an EIR is required."

The planning commission recommended adoption of the ordinance with the understanding that the powers of review specified apply equally to tentative and to preliminary subdivision maps.

PB Sanitary District official says Carmel District is 'running scared'

THE CHAIRMAN of the Pebble Beach Sanitary District board of directors said his agency has tried to be the peacemaker in a dispute with the Carmel Sanitary District over a proposed $13.7 million water reclamation project.

Dick Lord said the Carmel Sanitary District is "running scared" and "dragging their feet" in the legal battle over whether the Pebble Beach district should pay one-third of the costs of the second phase of the state-approved project.

The Pebble Beach district proposed last November that the dispute be settled by arbitration, but the Carmel district couldn't agree on conditions for arbitration. So the Pebble Beach district withdrew from participation in the project, and the Carmel district decided to sue.

A cross-complaint was filed by the Pebble Beach district in May and that lawsuit is now moving through Monterey County Superior Court.

Lord now charges the Carmel Sanitary District — which treats and disposes of Pebble Beach effluent — with promoting consolidating of the two districts to de-fuse the legal dispute.

"They know we've got them by the yang-yang and they're dragging their feet in this lawsuit," Lord told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "We've asked the state for a more equitable plan to spread the costs of the project throughout the entire Monterey Peninsula, since the benefit of more water would be available to the entire area."

The Carmel Sanitary District has petitioned the Local Agency Formation Commission for consolidation of both districts. Property owners in Pebble Beach — supported by the Pebble Beach Sanitary District — have petitioned LAFCO for consolidation of that district with County Service Area 42, which provides fire services.

Both proposals, which are mutually inconsistent, are to be heard by the LAFCO board of directors on Sept. 29.

UNDER THE OPERATING agreement between the Carmel and Pebble Beach sanitary districts, the Pebble Beach district is guaranteed up to one-third of the treatment capacity of the Carmel plant. Pebble Beach operates and owns its collection pipeline which connects to the Carmel plant.

"We had a contract to share one-third of the costs of a feasibility study for the wastewater reclamation project," Lord said. "We withdrew from that contract because the question of the Area of Special Biological Significance for Carmel Bay wasn't resolved."

The State Water Resources Control Board has designated Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance and has directed the Carmel Sanitary District to cease discharge into the bay during most months of the year.

The Carmel district secured a $10 million grant from the Envrionmental Protection Agency and the State Water Resources Control Board to implement a water reclamation project, which would provide water for golf course irrigation in Pebble Beach, thus reducing demand for potable water.

"The serious differences in public administration policies that exist between the Carmel Sanitary District and the Pebble Beach Sanitary District derive from the project alternative which the Carmel Sanitary District has chosen in its attempt to solve the disposal problem inherent in the ASBS designation," Lord wrote in a Pebble Beach position paper opposed to consolidation.

Don Freeman, attorney for the Carmel Sanitary District, said he plans to file a motion in Superior Court within a week, to seek an early trial date for the lawsuit involving the Pebble Beach district.

Special Council meeting today

An ordinance that changes the date of Carmel City Council meetings to the first and third Tuesdays of each month will receive second reading during a special council session at 3:30 p.m. in City Hall on Thursday, Aug. 20.

The council will also hold a joint session with the Traffic Committee to consider clarification of the committee's role and function.

A closed executive session to discuss pending litigation and to meet with the city's representative concerning conditions of employment is also scheduled.

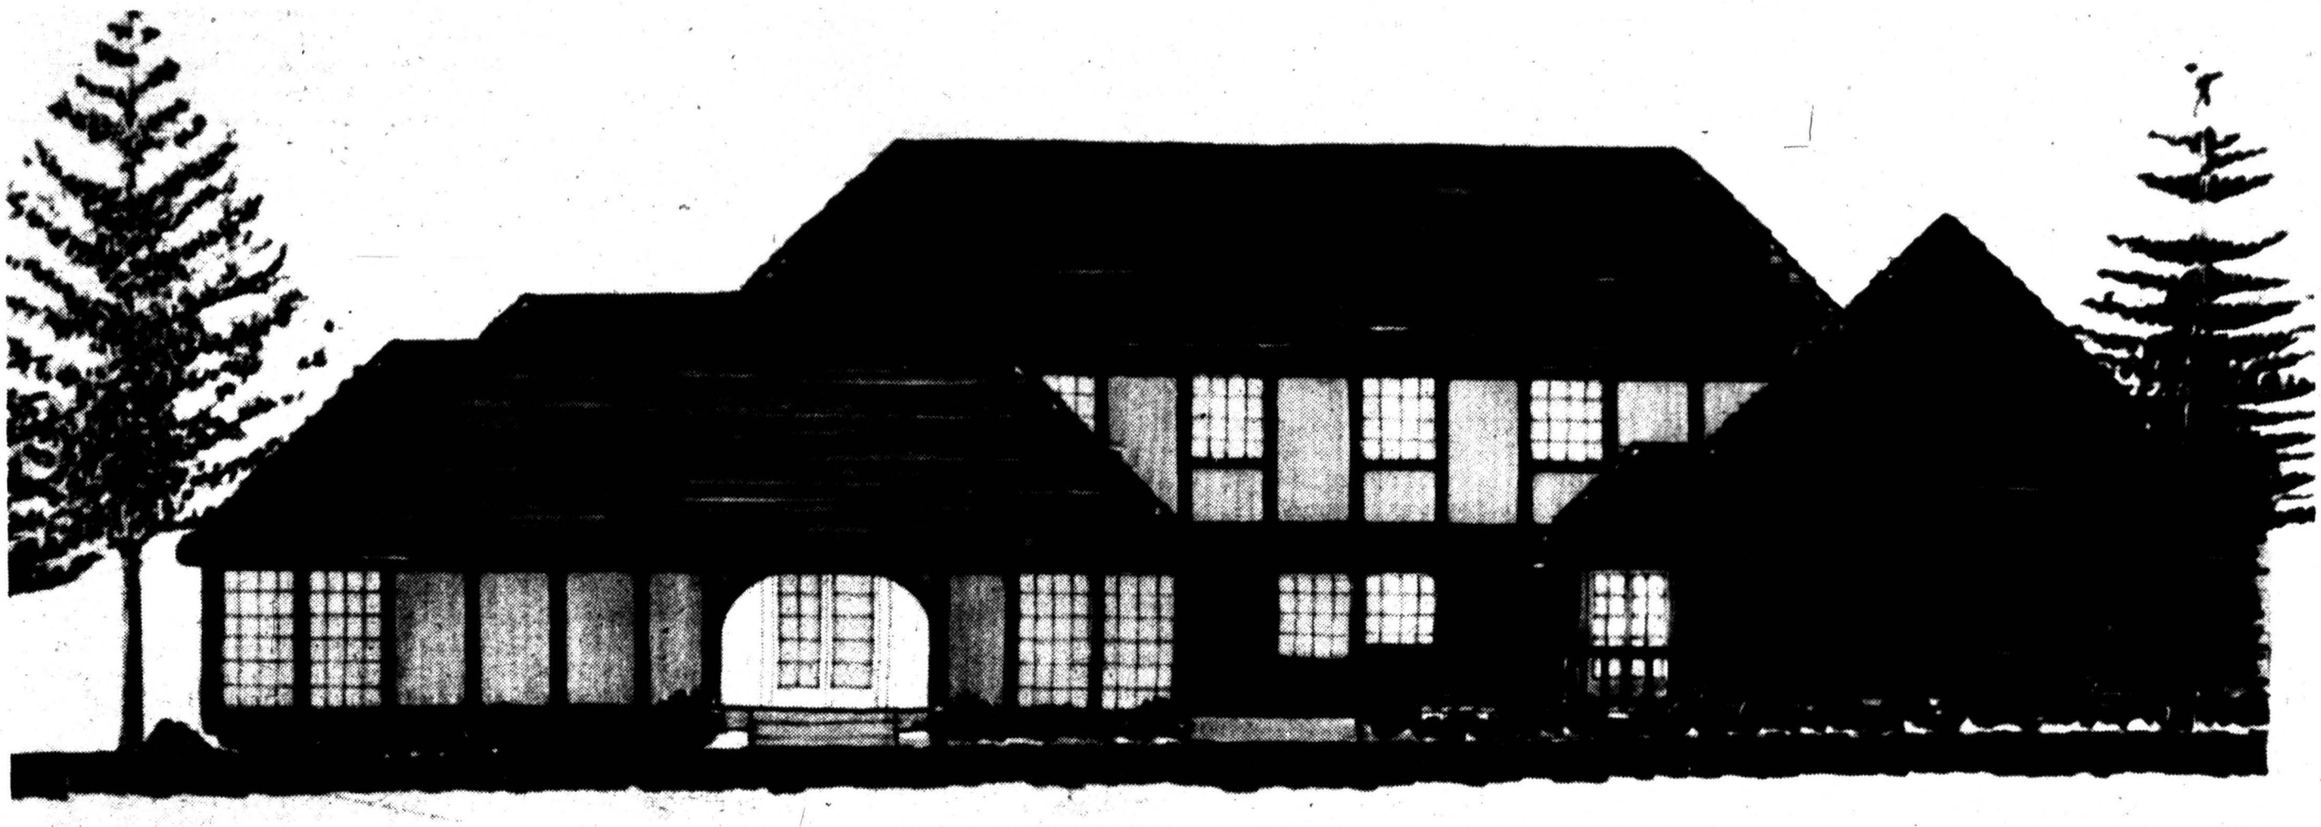
New commercial building to rise on corner of San Carlos and 7th

THE PLANNING COMMISSION is expected to give final approval next Wednesday, Aug. 26, for construction of a new commercial building on the southwest corner of San Carlos and 7th. The property, owned by Jim Burgess, was the site of an Arco gasoline station until last year. Developers are ALW Associates, a limited partnership. Principals are Carmel businessmen Jody Le Towt and Alan Williams. The two-story building will occupy 4,100 square feet on the 6,000 square foot lot and will have 8 percent in landscaping, Williams said. Five underground parking spaces will be provided, as required by law. The stucco and half-timber building will have a concrete slate roof, and there will be 1,200 square feet of upstairs space. Williams said the ground level shops would probably be leased to existing businesses in Carmel, and that the upstairs space would be leased for offices. The preliminary sketches shown here have been altered somewhat, to reflect a lower roofline. In the sketch below, the view from 7th street, the brick structure at right is part of the old existing service station. In the view from San Carlos at left, the entrance to underground parking garage can be seen. If planning commission approval is gained next week, construction could start in the middle of September, Williams said.



Laub appeals to planners on dividing

A dispute between businessman Paul Laub and the city of Carmel will be taken up by the Board of Adjustments when it meets Wednesday, Aug. 26 at 4 p.m. in City Hall.

Laub and the city agreed earlier to stipulations in Superior Court limiting the number of interior store walls that would be allowed in the Paradise store, pending outcome of a trial on the merits of the case.

Under the court agreement, Laub was to apply to have five walls reinstated. That application was denied by Building Inspector Ron Warren, based on the city's new moratorium regulating merchandise marts.

The planning commission (sitting as the Board of Adjustments) will consider Laub's appeal of the building inspector's decision.

Laub claims the decision against him is "arbitrary, capricious and against the law." He owns Paradise, on the northeast corner of Ocean and Dolores.

In addition to the Laub issue, the commission will take up 14 design review cases involving buildings and sites, and seven sign requests.

New Carmel HS football coach brings tough new discipline ... will it catch on?

By ROBERT MISKIMON

WATCH OUT! The Carmel High School Padres are coming and they're ready to play football.

They're lean and mean and eager to settle a few scores from past seasons, like last year when they lost nine out of 10 games.

Coach Dick Molen is adamant about training winners, and he's convinced that this year's team can't do anything but win.

That's because his training methods emphasize such old-fashioned virtues as discipline, structure, responsibility and dedication. The idea, Molen explained, is to cultivate a winning attitude and a disciplined body; the result is a superior football team.

His back-to-basics coaching methods are reinforced by 15 assistant coaches, including five graduates of the Naval Academy, and the remainder with military backgrounds.

'This year the rules are clear: if you want to play football, you've got to be a gentleman and a scholar as well, and you've got to play to win.'

This year the rules are clear: if you want to play football, you've got to be a gentleman and a scholar as well, and you've got to play to win.

"Football is a dictatorship," Molen said. "It's not a democracy. My coaching is an overall program that covers everything — values, taking on responsibility, getting a higher education. People are sick and tired of their children not learning anything and not having respect for their parents, or for themselves. That's why they're so unhappy."

Molen, a former linebacker for the San Diego Chargers, has been coaching for 20 years. He has lived in Carmel for 12 years and accepted the head coach job this year at Carmel High School because he's the kind of guy who likes a challenge.

"Last year, the kids on the team were smoking grass, drinking, goofing off. If any kid does that this year, he's off the team. There's no second chance," he declared.

Eighty students have turned out for football practice this summer, and they're gearing up for their first match of the season with Monterey High School on Sept. 19 at Monterey Peninsula College.

This year, there will be about 40 athletes on the varsity football squad and about 35 or 40 on the frosh-soph team, Molen said. There will be no junior varsity team because most of the other teams in the league have dropped their junior varsity squads due to declining enrollment.

MOLEN IS UNIQUELY qualified for the challenge of turning the Padres into a winning team on a number of counts, but particularly by his own victory against cancer a few years ago and his achievement of running in the Boston Marathon after radiation treatment.

In 1978, Molen was diagnosed as having Hodgkin's disease — cancer of the lymph system. He started radiation therapy but continued his daily regimen of running until he collapsed after several months of treatment, and cried helplessly.

"At that moment, I hated life, God, myself and everyone," Molen wrote in an account of his illness published in the April issue of Runner's World. "After what seemed an eternity, my treatments were over. My running came back slowly. But as time went on, I was able to run my five miles a day. When I went for my checkup, there wasn't a trace of cancer in my body."

Molen undertook the challenge of running in the Boston Marathon, which he finally did last April. He ran the 26-mile course in two hours, 51 minutes, and 50 seconds to finish 193rd among 1,774 runners in his group. He proudly displays a diamond ring which he won for his time in the grueling event.

"I felt like I had a lot to offer the boys," he said of his decision to coach the Padres this year. "The 15 assistant coaches will donate their time because they believe in my program. Simply stated, it's structure, discipline and direction. All the things kids are sadly lacking these days.

"Lord knows, there's been enough permissiveness, not only in the schools but on the athletic fields. It just doesn't work. I've seen what's happened to some athletic teams because of this attitude. You've got to have rules, standards, and structure. Young people respond well to that."

Molen found during his stint as a history teacher last year at Carmel Middle School that his students adapted well in the classroom to the kind of structure and discipline he will bring to the football field this year.

"I made it clear that the children would be in their seats on time, and they would have their materials every day. I made it clear to them from the first day what the standards were. They reacted so positively that we had the most fun of any class in the school. This is the same way I run a football team."

With the active support and encouragement of Carmel High School's new principal, Marsha Kading, Molen's spartan disciplines may well rub off on other students and set the tone for the entire school.

"These are big, strong boys," he said. "They're nice looking and most are intelligent. They're the natural leaders. We've had 80 kids working hard all summer. These kids weren't lying around on the beach, getting drunk.

"This has a tremendous impact on a small community, especially in a high school where the total enrollment is about 700 students. I want them to be good athletes and good students, as well as decent people. If you've got 80 athletes who are behaving themselves, it sets the pace for the rest of the school."

MOLEN BELIEVES the poor performance of the Padres in past seasons is attributable to a lack of leadership at the highest echelons of the school district. But he feels there has been an about-face in the Carmel Unified School District by both administrators and parents.

"The programs of the last 10 or 15 years have been a disaster," he declared. "It starts at the top, if you have weak administrators who don't have the guts to say, 'We won't take it any more.' Children will get away with just as much as you let them.

"Most of the parents have been ecstatic over this program. They've got a great attitude."

Molen believes his style of coaching reflects a shift in the attitude of Americans that is evident in many areas of contemporary life.

"We've got a president who's trying to pull things back together," Molen reflected.

'With the active support and encouragement of Carmel High School's new principal, Marsha Kading, Molen's spartan disciplines may well rub off on other students and set the tone for the entire school.'

"This idea that school is another Sesame Street and every teacher is Johnny Carson is ridiculous. Children want to know where they stand. Teachers are there to teach and direct and further the education of these young people.

"This is red-white-and-blue, John Wayne, apple pie stuff. Kids are just begging for someone to say, 'Let's stop all this doing your own thing.' "

In addition to the no-drinking, no-smoking rule — which Molen admits used to go without saying in years past — football players at Carmel High will be required to wear coats and ties to all their out-of-town games. While this may produce "culture shock" for a few, it's all part of the total character-building effort, Molen said.

Football practice started with individual meetings between Molen and the athletes in which he spelled out his expectations. A bond of trust and respect has grown from the students' awareness that he cares about them, Molen reported.

In addition to the stringent requirements of the playing field, football players will have to bring a report to Molen every week from their classroom teachers, indicating their progress in academics.

"Good, decent human beings — that's my goal," the coach said. "With a situation like that, you've automatically got winners. I want all the boys to get a meaningful experience; all of them will get a lot of chances to play football. They'll come off that field feeling good about themselves.

"I'm so pleased and so proud of every boy I've been associated with. They've really shown me a lot of class and I'm really pleased with what they're doing."

Hushed issue of SunsetCenter gym to be discussed Monday night

By BABS COROVESSIS

THE LONG-DISCUSSED city recreation program and the long unresolved gymnasium problem at Sunset Center are topics that will merge Monday, Aug. 24 when the Carmel Cultural Commission holds a work session with city officials and other representatives.

Other participants will be City Administrator Doug Peterson, Mayor Barney Laiolo and Ken White, a member of the board of trustees of the Carmel Unified School District. The meeting, scheduled for 4 p.m. at Sunset Center, is open to the public. No public comment will be allowed.

The gym and the planned recreational program have been linked for years. The issue was a hot topic as far back as 1976 when the council indicated the present gym should be retained until the Sunset Center bonds are retired (in 1989) and a new bond issue for new construction could be presented.

Then, as now, city officials were attempting to work out a joint plan with the school district to utilize their swimming pool and other equipment.

Last week, Peterson indicated that the recreation program being considered is "looking at long range situations on that subject." He added that the city has never contemplated any heavy financial commitment from the school district. "We have looked to them for the facilities they own and our similar geographic coverage," Peterson added.

THE GYMNASIUM apparently has a small number of ardent users, including members of the Carmel Police Department.

The location of the gym within Sunset Center has created noise problems. It sits almost directly in the center of the building in a downstairs area. Right above it are administrative offices for the Monterey County Symphony Association. Surrounding it are various rooms used for programs and rehearsals.

Richard Tyler, director of Sunset Center, said he had "nothing I can report on the gym at this time."

He indicated earlier that the cultural commission hopes to come up with a recommendation at its Aug. 31 meeting. That recommendation will be forwarded to the City Council, which originally sent the issue to the cultural commission.

The issue emerged when the council received several letters from organizations complaining about the gym.

Dorothy Dimond, former manager of the Monterey County Symphony Association, said in a letter that "it has been established that noise is the equivalent of physical assault on the body. I invite you to visit our office in Sunset Center directly over the gym to understand how true this is."

She said there have been times when she and her staff "have had to leave the office, being unable to work under the barrage of pounding from below." She also complained of jammed up cars and parking problems, particularly on concert nights.

In June, the board of directors of the Bach Festival sent a letter to the City Council stating, "we feel that the use of the gym during rehearsals and performances is not compatible with the Festival schedule during July and early August.

"The noise generated in the basement; is, of course, no one's fault, but it is disturbing and can be heard clearly in several parts of the theater," the letter continued.

A third letter was written in 1979 by James M.R. Glaser of Pebble Beach, who complained that at the time of the last lecture he attended "the same noisy disturbances were issuing forth from the gymnasium."

SUNSET DIRECTOR Tyler recalled that approximatley seven years ago the Carmel police asked for temporary use of the gym.

To Tyler, a complete recreation program is more than a gymnasium. "It includes a swimming pool and other activities that are for young and old alike and ages in between," he said.

Tyler said after a recreation committee studied and came up with plans to build a facility — possibly on Sunset's south end (Tenth Avenue) — the measure was placed on the council abeyance calendar in January, 1978.

"The gym is next to the theater and Carpenter Hall; on the other side, Sunset has lectures and meetings," Tyler said.

"I would favor any proposal that would make recreation available to all the people," he added. Sunset Center rooms are used so much, he said, that he has to limit the time in the gym.

Natalie Murray, chairman of the cultural commission, said the commission's goal at Monday's meeting and again at its monthly meeting the following Monday, "is to be fair to everyone. Whatever is decided on needs to be done as part of the overall community recreational plan. We're going to have to compromise."

She said there was some discussion of the possibility of using the Girl Scout house at the south end for the gym, and building a second, more solid floor.

APPRAISAL METHODS

Comedian Buddy Hacket put it nicely: "If everybody had the same opinion, every man would want to marry my wife." So goes the art of appraising the value of property. In the final analysis, every piece of property is different. Basically, there are three methods of arriving at a value estimate.

1. Comparison. A comparison is made as to price, value, and location in relation to other properties in the same neighborhood.

2. Reproduction Cost. How much would it cost to reproduce the structure? Add to this the value of the land and deduct for depreciation.

3. Capitalization. This is used for income property. The value is established by consideration of the present and future income value of the property.

Frequently, the appraiser will use all three methods. No single method can always be depended upon to produce reliable estimates by itself.

Carmel police log

By BABS COROVESSIS

(A partial list of Carmel Police activities)

Saturday, Aug. 8

12:40 a.m.: A 34-year-old San Francisco man was HELD BY EMPLOYEES of the Hogs Breath Inn after he became violent. Police arrived. Bartender declined to prosecute. Man released to a friend.

4:45 p.m.: FOUR MARIJUANA PLANTS were confiscated from the back garden of a home near Eighth and Casanova. Police apparently discovered the plants while following up a suspicious subjects call. The subjects were seen running away from the residence in question. The marijuana was pulled from the ground and brought to the station. The owner told police he merely kept the plants in the yard "as a novelty" and that he had not smoked marijuana in a number of months. No formal charges were filed. Man admonished about laws against cultivation of marijuana.

Sunday, Aug. 9

11:14 p.m.: PROPERTY DAMAGE, Perry Newberry and Fifth. Answering a call on a domestic disturbance, an officer made contact with a very large male. During the investigation it became necessary to take the man into custody. This resulted in a fight with the subject resisting and battering officer. During fight the officer received a hole in his long-sleeved uniform shirt. Replacement cost estimated from $20 to $30.

Monday, Aug. 10

10:48 p.m.: Petty theft at Jack London's. A BACK PACK VALUED AT $150 was missing. The owner said he set it near the door. Unable to locate.

Tuesday, Aug. 11

2:44 p.m.: Grand theft, La Playa Hotel. An electrician said his $300 METER VALVE WAS MISSING while he was doing some work in the area of the hotel.

10:32 p.m.: Juvenile traffic stop occurred at San Antonio and Eighth involving an 18-year-old Carmel youth on a Honda. He was cited for RECKLESS DRIVING AND EVADING AN OFFICER. At station youth said he did not want his mother present for questioning because he had had "one small bottle of wine." Youth cited and released to mother.

Wednesday, Aug. 12

3:05 p.m.: Disturbance (firecrackers). Juveniles reportedly SHOOTING FIRECRACKERS at Fourth and Guadalupe on the inside of a rock wall. Unit responded and advised adult with juveniles. Juveniles all denied shooting firecrackers.

12:49 a.m.: INVESTIGATION (PROWLER). Scenic and 11th. Reporting party suspected prowlers. Police found trash cans knocked over and a raccoon in the yard.

2:35 p.m.: Property damage to a four by eight barricade and stone wall at Casanova and Fourth. Occurred in night by unknowns.

10:24 p.m.: Fraud. General Store Restaurant reported a MEAL SKIP BY A PARTY OF SIX PERSONS who ran up a bill of $114.35. The party apparently left in a black Lincoln without paying. A woman later called and said she paid with her VISA card. Case still under investigation.

Thursday, Aug. 13

6:20 p.m.: Malicious mischief at Monte Verde and 10th. A group of juveniles was in the area THROWING OBJECTS from vehicles. Subjects were contacted by police, counseled and left the area.

8:16 p.m.: Report of DEAD SQUIRREL at Dolores and Fourth. Patrol unit reports squirrel is very ill but not deceased. SPCA notified.

9:18 p.m.: Disturbance (firecrackers). JUVENILES WITH FIRECRACKERS on the roadway reported at Scenic and 11th. Unable to locate by patrol unit. Only saw large group of subjects gathered on the beach.

11:27 p.m.: INVESTIGATION OF FOOTSTEPS. Reporting party claims of hearing footsteps on roof at Doud Arcade. Police found area clear.

Friday, Aug. 14

8:01 a.m.: COMMERCIAL BURGLARY at Carmel Hardware. Front window broken. Total damage $151 for broken glass, plus four buck knives stolen.

4:20 p.m.: Investigation (MEAL SKIP). Jack London's reports subject attempting to leave without paying. Resolved between owner and customer.

6:00 p.m.: Investigation of suspicious circumstances. Subject found CAMPING IN MISSION TRAILS PARK. The man, a transient, was counseled and released and said he would leave the city and camp elsewhere.

9:27 p.m.: Carmel Mission CONVENT REPORTED A LIGHT ON in a classroom which should be unoccupied. Three units

Saturday, Aug. 15

9:22 a.m.: Ordinance code violation. Leaf blower spotted in the area of Ninth and Monte Verde. Gone on arrival.

12:10 a.m.: Disturbance of the peace. Subject at Maxwell McFly's REFUSES TO LEAVE PREMISES. All units respond. Man sent home in a taxi.

1:42 p.m.: Property damage. Man said vehicle behind car hit his vehicle an estimated 5 to 10 minutes earlier. Man pointed out a SMALL DENT ON THE TOP PART OF HIS TRUNK. Officer said damage looked minor, but the man claimed it would cost $800. Officer then noticed a time chalk mark on the other vehicle and ascertained it was put on the tire 45 minutes before. "Well, time flies," the complaining subject remarked. The officer then measured and ascertained the car could not have caused the dent. Officer refused to take accident report and left the scene.

2:55 p.m.: Disturbance (noise). TREE TRIMMER at Mission and 11th making noise. Worker contacted with no results. Two patrol units contacted individual.

8:00 p.m.: Assistance requested at Ocean View and Scenic. A CABIN CRUISER REPORTEDLY IN TROUBLE, on the rocks at the 'Frank Lloyd Wright house.' Officer found a gathering of people out near the vessel. The boat had a dead battery. Coast Guard contacted but could not help initially because it could not get in past the kelp beds. Temporary battery supplied by Lugo's Shell Station and later returned.

Sunday, Aug. 16

12:44 a.m.: Driver of a car at Ocean and Junipero stopped for ROUTINE TRAFFIC VIOLATION. Three men inside. Driver inquired, "How come you stopped me? Did we commit a burglary or something?" Traffic citation issued.

1:02 a.m.: Disturbing the peace. Someone reportedly RINGING THE FRONT DOORBELL of the Carmel Mission. One unit responded and reports subjects ringing bell wanting a place to spend the night. Subjects directed to Monterey campground.

1:03 a.m.: Disturbing the peace. Del Mar beach area. Anonymous report of several SUBJECTS YELLING at above location. Subjects contacted and advised to leave the area.

9:15 a.m.: INVESTIGATION OF BICYCLE at Carmelo and 13th. Area resident concerned bike may be hit by vehicle. Unit checked and found bike securely chained and was no traffic hazard.

6:21 p.m.: Man reports MISSING AIRLINE TICKETS lost in Carmel business district.

9:57 p.m.: At Guadalupe and Seventh a man said a group of juveniles left a FLAMING WAD OF PAPER on his doorstep, rang the bell, then fled on foot. Youths gone on arrival by police.

10:05 p.m.: DRUNK PEDESTRIAN reported at Del Mar beach. Two GI's on the beach found making noise. One reported another had a fight "with a civilian and got beaten up." Police found the man, very drunk and asleep on the toilet. He had his face beaten and a shoulder scratched. Man taken to station and military police picked him up at 3 a.m.

Monday, Aug. 17

5:16 a.m.: Prowler reported at Dolores and 13th. Reporting party HEARD NOISES DOWNSTAIRS. House secure. No sign of forced entry.

10:29 a.m.: Left Bank Cafe in Carmel Plaza reports UNWANTED SUBJECT COMPLAINING about food. Person asked to leave by police.

11:45 p.m.: An 18-year-old Carmel youth was CAUGHT ROLLING A JOINT at Scenic and 9th. When the officer caught him in possession, the youth replied, "I'm glad I was caught cause the stuff wasn't very good anyway.' The officer confiscated a small baggie of marijuana for destruction.

11:65 p.m.: Disturbing the peace at Seventh and Junipero. HYSTERICAL FEMALE FOUND by officers, who observed her wrists were bleeding. The woman became violent and irrational and police had to carry her out of her house. Once inside the patrol car, she began kicking the rear windows violently. She was advised to stop three times then was maced. The kicking stopped. She was treated by the Carmel Fire Department. The woman later told officers she was angry at her family and hit the door so hard she cut her wrists.

New seafood restaurant will not be called Fresh Fish Cafe

By FLORENCE MASON

NOW IT can be told: a fresh fish restaurant is due to open at Mission and Fourth, where Village Electric used to be. In all probability, however, it will not be called "Fresh Fish Cafe."

Co-owner Ron Reynolds appeared before the Business License and Code Review Board for himself and Rudy Reate, who was out of town. The business is incorporated as Fresh Fish Cafe and Reynolds stressed to the board that "It is not a fancy French restaurant or a Mexican one or anything else. Just fresh fish."

The owners believe that the corporate name and this concept are significant in their marketing and advertising.

But the name, Fresh Fish Cafe, had already been termed "out of charcter with Carmel" in a unanimous vote of the planning commission. The BLCRB discussion was from a different point of view; it was concerned about emergency services.

Police Chief Ellis cited possible confusion with the Fish House on the Park and with Flaherty's Fish Market. Earlier, someone had suggested an alternate: La Baliene. Reynolds was not receptive to that, saying a name that translates "The Whale" was both inappropriate and misleading.

After considerable discussion and some attempts by members of the board to be helpful and suggest other names (Fish at Fourth?) the matter was held over, to give the partners time to consult and come up with something that might please both the BLCRB and the planning commission.

Remodeling will be significant and Chief Building Inspector Ron Warren referred to "significant problems" involved in transforming the electrical shop into a restaurant. That made the owners' hopes of opening in 60 to 90 days seem somewhat optimistic.

THE RESTAURANT, when it succeeds in overcoming all the hurdles, will serve fresh fish brazier style. The concept was developed by Reynolds and Reate after an extensive marketing survey. Similar restaurants in Palo Alto, Alameda, San Jose and Santa Barbara were studied. "The granddaddy of them all," Reynolds said, "is in Newport Beach."

A seating capacity of 62 is planned. Lunch and dinner will be served and there will be an outdoor eating area. In a planned second phase, there is also provision for a dessert area.

CITY OFFICIALS must have been delighted to see the clean, clear window at Swenson's ice cream store on Ocean. It lasted for about a week. Then new decals were pasted up.

The store's use of such decals had been a bone of contention for some time. At issue: whether the decorations constitute decorative art, as the store owners claim, or were pasted on the windows to attract attention, thereby coming under the city's sign regulations. For a short time, the question appeared to be moot. No longer?

KAY HUNTER, manager of Lobos Lodge, must have left a recent meeting of the BLCRB in a glow. She appeared for the new owners of the motel — a corporation headed by Dorothy Althoff — that is applying for a new business license.

One of the first questions Kay was asked was whether or not she would be staying on as manager. Her affirmative reply elicited these comments:

"We hope you stay 100 years," said Fire Marshal Vern Allred. "You are a good representative of your profession."

"I can only echo those sentiments," agreed Police Chief Bill Ellis. "No need wishing you luck because you have it."

The recipient of all these kudos said, "I came back floating." She wasn't sure how she earned the praise — perhaps because there had not been any problems or any reason for her to need city services? At any rate, she was appreciative.

Kay herself came to this area about 10 years ago, working as manager of Tradewinds Motel for three years before coming to Lobos Lodge when it opened.

Mrs. Hunter supervises about 14 people and does a morning shift at the desk. She said that the average annual occupancy rate at Lobos Lodge is 95 percent, which means that they are full many months of the year.

IF YOU HAVE been wondering who will be occupying the eastern half of the space formerly occupied by Raggett's (under what must now be the most secure roof in Carmel!), wonder no more. It's the Game Gallery!

Harry Domash and Norma Black are moving their store lock, stock and barrel from its present location on San Carlos to the new Ocean Avenue spot as soon as possible after Labor Day.

Because it qualifies as a hobby shop and not a toy shop or gift shop, it doesn't come under the new city moratorium on land use changes. The only thing they had to wait for was completion of the interior work.

The move was being made for the prime location, Domash said, not for any additional space. In fact, there is a little less space in the new quarters but it works out about the same because of a storage area that's now available.

What are the "hot" items at The Game Gallery now? Rubik's Cube, for sure. Domash told us that people were lined up all day when the store presented 13-year-old David Alcocer, the student who mastered the puzzle and offered to work people's cubes for them. Another best-seller in the game world is Pente, a strategy game that Domash said is both nice to look at and great to play.

I. MAGNIN is also taking a big step. Manager Carol Seres told us that it's true the well-known women's store will soon have a men's shop!

The location is separate from the women's store on the Ocean Avenue level at the Plaza, part of the location formerly occupied by Gentlemen's Quarters.

Mrs. Seres was unable to give us an opening date, as they are waiting for the building permit and the remodeling which will "update the space and tie it in, decoratively, with the main store."

According to Mrs. Seres, the move came about through public demand in the form of frequent inquiries by prospective male customers. Active men's wear will be featured. Mrs. Seres will manage both stores.

She has been here with I. Magnin for 13 years and prior to that was with the same store in San Francisco. She and her husband, Myron, who is a claims investigator, live in Corral de Tierra. It doesn't sound as though she is going to have much

ANOTHER NEWS NOTE: Cornucopia, which has been a strictly vegetarian restaurant, is now serving fish dishes, plus chicken and eggs in various forms. The restaurant is in the Barnyard's Monterey Barn; there is a natural food store alongside.

Among the new items are a seafood salad for lunch, chicken dinners, fettucine (egg noodles) and omelettes.

"THERE ARE ONLY two places in the world — Carmel and Switzerland!" The words come from Henry Corbat, local jeweler who just returned from a trip to his native country. His enthusiasm was not dampened by pouring rain. "Even so," he said, "it is incredibly beautiful. Just as Carmel is gorgeous whether there is fog or rain or snow." (Snow?)

The purpose of Corbat's trip was to escort his 80-year-old mother from their home town (Bienne) for a visit here. She will be with Corbat until May, when the Swiss winter ends.

While he was there he looked at beautiful jewelry and made some purchases for his stores on San Carlos and Fifth and at The Lodge in Pebble Beach.

In his own home town he also ran into a friend and former employee. Corbat knew that Kathy Duggi, who worked for him three years ago, was somewhere in Europe. To his surprise and delight, she happened to be in Bienne when he was; excited gestures from one sidewalk cafe to another led to a fine reunion.

Corbat found that the watch industry in Switzerland has been "totally harmed" by the Japanese watchmakers. "It's a very serious thing," he said. "The Swiss can only compete when they make expensive pieces, using diamonds and the like."

Conditions in Switzerland, in general, are very good, he said. There is no poverty in Switzerland and the rate of inflation has been less than 1 percent per year for about the last 20 years. "It's a well-organized, well-disciplined country," Corbat said. "There is very little waste; they just live differently."

WELLS LEAVITT, new owner of Fernand Restaurant in Carmel Valley Village, is quick to say that he is not really "of Los Angeles" as reported recently in another newspaper.

On the contrary, he has lived in the Carmel area most of his life. The only connection with Los Angeles is that his father, formerly dean of MPC's evening division, now lives there, and Leavitt himself studied in Los Angeles for a time. But he has been back six months. Now living in Monterey, he will soon be moving to Carmel Valley.

While in Southern California, Leavitt took cooking and wine classes at the International College. This was to round out his experience as a private chef and caterer. Fernand Restaurant (he'll keep the name) is his first restaurant business venture on his own.

The restaurant re-opened early this month after extensive remodeling. Leavitt had a clear picture of the atmopshere he wanted to create: continental, with more formal dining. For the present, it is open just for dinner, six days a week (closed Monday) and for Sunday brunch. The next phase will be development of a patio where lunches will be featured.

Leavitt said that wines have been his hobby for years; Fernand Restaurant will have an extensive list of both California and French wines. As for any other interests, Leavitt says the restaurant has taken over; there is no time, and no inclination. "This is my life," Wells Leavitt said, apparently very content to have it so.

THAT YELLOW "Don't tread on me" flag outside Paul Laub's Paradise Mall is one way he lets people know that he is proud to be an American.

That's what Laub told us when we inquired. The flag, as well as a present-day American flag, was put up on July 4th causing at least one member of the City Council to question its meaning and purpose.

Laub believes that if Americans know what July 4th is all about, they should know about this flag. Or, he said, they can go and look it up in the library.

To be sure of my facts, I did just that. There is some dispute about its origins and use, even among historians, but most agree that the snake on the flag was one of the colonists' first emblems. It was seen in newspapers and elsewhere as early as May, 1754. The first snake flags were seen around 1774-1776 and three flags from that period still exist.

Two are regimental ones, with the snake on a background of stripes. The third, from which Laub's is copied, has the snake and the motto on a plain yellow background. It was the rank flag of the commander-in-chief of the United States Navy, early in 1776. A copy was given to the Provincial Congress of South Carolina, resulting in the flag being considered by some — incorrectly, said our historian — as the flag of the South Carolina navy.

Perhaps the most significant point about the flag, in view of Laub's embattled position with the city in regard to subdividing his store space, is the historian's statement that the motto "indicated a change from the (colonies') previous period of disunity to a new era of defiance."

Laub said he doesn't have any plans, at present, to remove either flag.

BARON KLAUS von der Horst looks lovingly at his new bride, the former Melinda Karen Davis.

THE BRIDE'S parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Don Davis of Harbor Island, Miami Beach, Fla., hold their granddaughter Missy Davis who was her mother's flower girl. The wedding was held at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach.

MRS. ELEANOR Beline adjusts Ted Blum's boutoniere before the wedding ceremony begins.

Pine Whispers

Florida visits Carmel en masse

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

TED BLUM, an attorney from Miami, Fla., area called to tell me that he enjoys this column and to give me a bit of news. Ted said that over the past 10 years he and about 20 other Floridians have made a habit of spending part of the summer in Carmel. And having lived in Naples, Fla., for 10 years myself, I can understand their desire to escape the unbearable heat and humidity.

Also a part of the group are Mr. and Mrs. Don Davis. Don is a retired Eastern Airlines pilot, and the Davises along with the rest of the group are terribly excited about the recent wedding of their daughter, Melinda, to Baron Klaus Vonder-Horst of Germany.

Melinda makes her home in Long Beach but because her parents are in Carmel for the summer she decided to be married at the Beach and Tennis Club. The wedding ceremony and the reception were held at the club on August 18.

Another lovely lady who joins this group each year is Mrs. Charles Gibson, widow of the gentleman who started the Gibson Refrigerator Company. Mrs. Gibson, formerly of Miami, now lives in Beverly Hills.

Another fun event for the group was the recent birthday party hosted by Ted at the Beach and Tennis Club for Albert Reese, who celebrated his big 40th.

And another friend of Ted's who is part of the Florida group and who is here this summer is Mrs. Luther Smith who also has a ranch in Reno. This is her second summer of vacationing in Carmel and this year she brought along her daughter and son-in-law, Jane and Mark Harlow.

Most of the group will soon be heading back to Florida but they want it known that their annual visit to Carmel is one of the highlights of the year.

BABCOCKS ARE BACK

Jadwiga Babcock and her movie actress daughter, Barbara Babcock, have returned home from their two-week cruise to Alaska and Jadwiga says they both caught terrible colds during the last two days of the cruise.

Jadwiga lives at Hacienda Carmel but Barbara has returned to her Hollywood home and the fantastic news that she has received an Emmy nominiation for best lead actress for her role in the television series, Hill Street Blues.

Barbara has already been signed for the first four episodes of "Blues" when it starts up again this fall — and by the looks of things, lucky Barbara (who has earned every bit of it) isn't going to have to go a-hoofing around town looking for work — she'll probably be swamped with offers!

And as for the cruise to Alaska, Jadwiga says they had a grand time in spite of the weather, which was overcast all but one day. They visited Juneau, the capitol of Alaska, and also spent one day touring Glacier Bay.

Welcome home Jadwiga — and congratulations Barbara!

ART AND MOVIE PERSONALITIES VISIT CARMELITES

Never a dull moment at the Carmel home of Bob Canon and Jim Stone. Their houseguests this past week included noted artist Bennett Bradbury and also Hollywood script writer Michael Michaelian and producer Michael Severeid, son of the famous newscaster and war correspondent Eric Severeid.

Bennett, who is famous as a marine painter (and also for his fabulous collection of jade and turquoise jewelry), is on the Peninsula to teach a two-week workshop (he never takes more than 20 students) which will conclude with a festive reception at the Barn at Mission Ranch on Sunday, Aug. 23 from 1-6 p.m. Those interested in meeting the artist and viewing his works are welcome.

Bennett's background is fascinating. Before becoming famous as an artist he was a concert pianist. Then, after a stint in the Navy, he joined Walt Disney Productions. Later he moved to Big Sur and immersed himself in his art. In 1970 he moved to Laguna where he opened his own gallery and also taught workshops. About three years ago he bought another home in Hawaii and opened a gallery there. So it's safe to say that Bennett is frequently on the move, but he and Bob have been friends for over 25 years so he tries to spend a fraction of each year here on the Peninsula.

Michaelian and Severeid are also longtime friends of Bob's and are here to discuss Bob's idea for doing a movie about the modern-day Army. Canon and Stone are thinking about participating in the production end of the idea.

Michaelian, no newcomer to the movie game, has worked on numerous segments of such television favorites as Charlie's Angels, Hawaii Five-O, CHiPs and others.

Severeid was vice-president of MGM studios, in charge of production, until he resigned last January to free-lance. The two Mikes have now formed their own production comany and both plan to write, produce and direct.

And just to get that old Army feeling, Bob, Mike and Mike spent last Thursday at Fort Ord where they went on maneuvers with the troops — so if they lived through it we'll probably see all of them at Bennett's reception Aug. 23.

A BUSY LADY!

Maggie Eastwood is a busy lady! She and her good friend, Kim Novak Malloy, are thinking about opening a larger health studio (Maggie now owns Transitions) — and she is now enjoying a 10 day mini-vacation which included participating in the Hyatt Lake Tahoe Tennis Tournament.

Maggie's friend, Henry Wynberg, was there to cheer her on and then the two headed to Vail, Colorado so Maggie could check out the remodeling being done on her condo and get in a bit of swimming and relaxation — because the snow and skiing which Maggie loves so much just aren't happening yet!

And our sincere condolences go out to Henry who recently lost his only son in an automobile accident.

BENEFIT SHOWING FOR HOSPICE HUGE SUCCESS

The Highlands Gallery of Sculpture held a benefit showing on behalf of the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula at the gallery on Sunday, Aug. 9.

Sculpture by 18 different artists was on display and available for purchase. Some of the artists including gallery owner Paul Wilson (Paul is also an M.D.), Bert Conaghan and Randy Puckett were present to welcome guests.

Gallery manager, Jacquelene Colbert, also greeted guests and along with other volunteers helped serve wine and a variety of canapes.

Representatives from Hospice included Executive Director Dr. Raymond Decker; Carol McClure, director of financial development and public relations; Sabra Hudson, coordinator for special services; Dr. Jerry Rubin, medical director; and Gene Zion, patient care volunteer.

Hospice volunteers Frances Fuess and Sylvia Sheingold also spent part of the afternoon at the gallery.

The exhibit, which will be on view for the public through Sept. 12, represents a wide range of three-dimensional works,

HOW TO TAKE THE GAMBLE OUT OF WOMEN's FASHIONS

Even if you avoid the extremes of fad and frump, some women's fashions can still be a gamble.

But not at Bellissima!

We start with nothing but fashion-conscious clothes, selected with taste and imagination. Neither trendy nor dowdy. Fabrics you'll love — silks, knits, light wools — and styles that will please you next year. And next.

Our emphasis is on the daytime dress. Plus simply beautiful blouses and imported, hand-knit sweaters.

All with an eye to enduring fashion.

That isn't all. We'll help you choose only colors and styles that show you at your best. (We have books to help.) And when you try something on that doesn't work for you, we'll tell you.

Bellissima! wants you back next year. Still looking like a winner.

THE SPINNING WORLD OF GINGER ESSICK

Ginger Essick, a self-taught spinner and weaver is busy as a beaver these days as she prepares for her upcoming demonstration of the art at I. Magnin on Sept. 4 and 5.

Before moving to Carmel a year ago, Ginger and her husband, Hop, lived in Carmel Valley. About five years ago, Ginger became interested in spinning and weaving so she took a short class through an adult school to get started — and then continued learning through her friends and books.

Ginger, who spends about eight hours of every day at her work, also dyes her own yarns. "You spin, then dye, then weave or knit," she explained, adding that she works with some of the most beautiful natural fibers anywhere in the world. She said she works mainly with silk from China and also with cashmere and camel down.

During the two-day demonstration many of the items which Ginger makes including sweaters, vests, kimonos, shawls and belts will be for sale.

Ginger says she never has to worry about Christmas shopping as she makes all of her own gifts. So, if you've been looking for that special something for that certain person — now's your chance!

THE TWO LIVES OF PAT DUVAL

Hey, that man can really sing!

What more beautiful place to watch one of our fabulous sunsets then from the lounge at the Highlands Inn. Well, on Saturday nights the sunset loses the attention of the patrons to the singing of Pat Duval, and yep — you're right — it's the same Pat Duval who has been a patrolman with the Monterey County Sheriff Department for the past 14 years.

Pat, who loves nothing better then to give his vocal cords a good work-out, has been a "guest" singer at the Inn for many years but about eight months ago the Inn management offered Pat the Saturday night job — pay and all!

Ted Roe, a pianist who has been at entertaining at the Inn for the past 11 years accompanies Pat, who said that most of the requests are for popular music or show tunes.

Pat's territory with the sherriff's department covers Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach and the Big Sur Coast. And what does he do on those quiet nights when not much of anything is going on — he sings, that's what!

Pat has also been doing a few talk shows and has frequently been a guest soloist with the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society.

Would he like to turn professional? "You bet," said Pat. "I think it would be a terrific life."

Call Terri Lee — 625-4431.

SCULPTOR Randy Puckett discusses one of his works with Hospice representative Carol McClure at the recent benefit showing held at the Highlands Gallery of Sculpture.

MR. AND MRS. Ray Winsted Sr., attended the benefit showing at the Highlands Gallery of Sculpture on Aug. 9. A portion of the proceeds from the showing will go to benefit the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Middle School registration scheduled for Sept. 2 and 3

Registration for Carmel Middle School students will be Wednesday, Sept. 2 for sixth graders, and Thursday, Sept. 3 for seventh and eighth graders.

Sixth grade registration will be in the school cafeteria from 9 to 11 a.m. Schedules and lockers will be distributed at that time. From 11 to 11:30 a.m., Frank Lynch, the new principal, will preside over an assembly for parents and students in the gym.

Seventh and eighth grade registration will be in the cafeteria from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., with an assembly from 11:30 to noon in the gym.

Students who are unable to register at these times may pick up their schedules the first day of school, Sept. 9, in the main office.

Jennifer MacLennan to dean's list

Jennifer Ann MacLennan, daughter of Mrs. Marlene MacLennan of Carmel, has been named to the spring dean's list at the University of Oregon in Eugene.

Miss MacLennan, a sophomore, is majoring in English.

GORDON DAVIS ELECTED

Gordon D. Davis, headmaster of the Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach, was recently elected vice president of the Country Day School Headmasters Assoc. of the United States.

The association, founded in 1912, held its annual meeting at Oglethorpe University in Atlanta.

Davis' first assignment will be to represent the Country Day School Headmasters of the United States and bring official greetings to the Headmasters of the Canadian Assoc. of Independent Schools at their annual meeting in Vancouver, B.C.

Fire chiefs to submit plan to apportion $1.1 million

THE MONTEREY County Fire Chiefs Association will recommend a Solomon-type apportionment to the Board of Supervisors of $1.1 million in augmentation funds to county fire districts.

Supervisors are scheduled to consider the fire chiefs' recommendation Aug. 25 at 2 p.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Requests from the 12 fire districts total $1.8 million, but the county has only $1.1 million in augmentation funds. End result will be greater reliance on volunteers throughout the county, said Ron Zeise, Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department chief.

Zeise served as chairman of the subcommittee appointed June 30 by supervisors — composed of the chiefs of the 12 fire districts — which reviewed the districts' requests and made recommendations for funding for 1981-82.

If supervisors follow the committee's recommendations, all the districts would get some funds but hardly any would get exactly what they requested.

Two primary considerations in making the recommendations were the funding level required by the districts to maintain the current level of service and whether the districts had passed — or attempted to pass — user fees.

The committee held five meetings over a three-week period to review the districts' budgets and develop recommendations. No fire chiefs participated in formulation of recommendations affecting their own district, Zeise said.

The recommendations for Carmel and Carmel Valley fire departments:

•Carmel Highlands Fire Department. Request: $53,982. Needed to maintain current level of service: $35,000. Recommended: $34,500.

•Carmel Valley Fire Department: Request: $84,838. Needed for current level of service: $84,838. Recommended $84,000.

•Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department: Request: $47,750. Needed to maintain current service: $47,520. Recommended: $47,000.

•County Service Area 39 (Aguajito area): Request: $10,000. Needed to maintain current service: $10,000. Recommended: $10,000.

•County Service Area 42 (Pebble Beach): Request: $100,000. Needed to maintain current service: $70,000. Recommended: $70,000.

•County Service Area 43 (mouth of Carmel Valley): Request: $143,000. Needed to maintain service: $143,000. Recommended: $114,000.

EACH OF THE 12 fire districts completed three-page questionnaires on their financial condition and attached a copy of their 1981-82 budget with their request for funds, Zeise explained.

The requests were screened after representatives of each of the districts had met personally with the committee.

"The districts made their presentations and we said there isn't that much money available," Zeise said. "There were a few heavy discussions, but everyone handled it well. There were a lot of debates but no arguing.

"A couple of the districts seemed to believe that the volunteer districts should give up their augmentation funds because we'd passed user fees. But we tried to follow the intent of the board of supervisors, which was to encourage those districts which had passed fees to become self-sufficient.

"We tried to protect districts with user fees. The principle was that those areas couldn't go below the figure needed to maintain current levels of service without increasing their user fee," Zeise said.

•Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District has four staffers, who maintain one station with a one-man engine company supplemented by 17 volunteers. The district has attempted to pass a user fee three times. A $100 annual user fee was defeated last June.

•Carmel Valley Fire Protection District also has four staff members who maintain one fire station with a two-man response, supplemented by 34 volunteers. The district passed a user fee in September of 1980 on the second attempt. One-fourth of the district budget comes from user fee revenues.

•Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Protection District has four staffers who maintain one station with a single fire engine and one-man response supplemented by 22 volunteer firefighters. A user fee was approved by voters last May. Fee revenues account for 27 percent of the district budget.

•County Service Area 39 maintains one fire station with one fire engine, and a three-man response. The district passed a user fee last June on the second attempt. That fee generates 16.7 percent of district revenues.

•County Service Area 42 maintains one fire station with a three-man engine company response. The district also passed a user fee last June on the second attempt. User fees account for 20 percent of the budget.

•County Service Area 43 maintains one fire engine with a three-man response at one fire station. The district has established a target date of January, 1982 to reduce the staff to two and to supplement personnel with volunteers. A user fee was defeated in June of 1980 and in June of 1981.

THE SUBCOMMITTEE studied but rejected several funding mechanisms based on rigid percentages to the various fire districts, Zeise said.

"We played around with eight different options," he said. "One was that every district would get 20 percent of its budget from augmentation funds. But the supervisors were against that because they wouldn't have control over the size of the districts' budgets."

The county augmentation funds are a portion of the county general fund revenue derived from the $4 per $100 assessed valuation property tax rate established by Prop. 13. They are local property tax funds collected within Monterey county and are not a form of outside state assistance.

'Gunman' hits library

WHEN THIS MAN with a gun ran through the children's room at the Harrison Memorial Library last week, he was greeted more with giggles than cries of alarm. The man was David Maradei, assistant postmaster in Carmel, and he was helping out the library's summer reading program for youngsters. The program is based on a theme of spies and detectives, with the kids joining the "L.I.A.", or "Library Intelligence Agency." The young sleuths were in the middle of a discussion about collecting evidence when Maradei came through, and just as quickly ran out the exit.

Airport condo EIR stalled; health dept. wants data

Preparation of an environmental impact report for the proposed 110-unit condominium project at the Carmel Valley Airport has been stalled by a health department request for more information on a community septic system.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors ordered preparation of an EIR June 9, but no contract for that document has been signed yet, said Kathy Stein of the county Planning Department.

The Monterey County Health Department has requested soil borings, percolation tests, drainage studies and geologic studies in the area of the proposed development before the EIR is processed, she added.

Health officials have stated their opposition to the project because of the danger of groundwater contamination from the septic system, but supervisors could not refuse to order preparation of the EIR on that basis.

Density is another potential problem for the project, which is proposed by developer Gerald Barrick of Palo Alto for construction on the Valley airport property owned by Peter and Mary Delfino of Carmel Valley.

"We haven't written a scope of work for the EIR yet because the health department is still getting more information," Stein said. "We probably won't have a contract signed until a month from now at the earliest."

After the EIR for the airport project was ordered by the Board of Supervisors, the planning commission recommended approval of a proposed amendment to the subdivision ordinance which would permit the county to refuse projects in conflict with planning and zoning laws.

That amendment will go to the supervisors for consideration Sept. 8. It was proposed by Fifth District Supervisor William Peters because of reluctance by both the supervisors and planning commissioners to issue an EIR for the project.

Although preparation of an EIR for the condominium development has been approved, there can be no use permit consideration by the planning commission until a court-mandated moratorium on new development is lifted.

That moratorium was recently extended to July 1, 1982 or until the Carmel Valley Master Plan is revised and adopted by the supervisors.

City wants more ideas for Piccadilly uses

NOW THAT YOU'VE got Piccadilly, what do you do with it?

That was the question landscape architect Gordon Andrews asked residents Thursday night, Aug. 13, in the first of two planned community workshops.

Andrews told an estimated 15 persons that "things are moving very fast." (The next community workshop on Piccadilly is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 27 at Room 10 in Sunset Center at 7:30 p.m.)

"Right now I'm not proposing any ideas at all. I'm just weighing the advantages and disadvantages. I'm just exploring. I'm on receptive right now," Andrews said.

He encouraged participants to throw out any far-fetched ideas because "it might make something click and come up with something no one ever dreamed of."

Andrews passed out a small drawing of the park area, and offered pens and crayons to those wanting to draw in their ideas.

At the second community meeting Andrews said he will present more sketches that have a graphic representaiton of some of the ideas presented from this first community meeting.

One woman in the audience told those present she was quite attached to the Piccadilly site because she lived in the house on that site starting in 1915. She recalled having a swing tied to a tree there as a young girl.

Her suggestion was to have a ramp up to a deck looking over into the garden, with picnic tables on the ramp or deck.

She added that there could be scenes depicting the history of Carmel along the ramp.

BOB EVANS, a member of the Forestry Commission, urged that efforts be made "to try our best not to make this park something subject to vandalism."

He referred to incidents on the beach during the July 4th celebration. Evans said he was opposed to having picnic tables because they would attract too many tourists.

"If we eliminate some of these invitations to mischief, we'll be way ahead," Evans said.

Jean Mitchell, representing the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club, announced she was "thrilled at your getting started on the park."

She said she and other garden club members had walked over the property many times, and she offered a number of suggestion.

To cover the long wall on the south side of the lot, Mrs. Mitchell suggested painting it a neutral color and erecting a redwood trellis with proper plants.

Should Piccadilly be fenced? Matt Smith, chairman of the Forestry Commission said he considered one of the overriding problems to be "police and security."

He said he could not envision the park open 24 hours a day because unlike Devendorf, it was not open on all four sides.

Andrews called the location of Piccadilly "a challenging portion of the design."

The architect said that while looking at the land there is "a natural inclination to have winding paths," he acknowledged that it might not go well with the security issue.

"With the park enclosed on three sides, it could be one terrible place to police," Smith said.

Mrs. Mitchell added that her group thought primarily of Piccadilly "as a daytime park."

Evans pointed out on the fence issue that the new rule is front fences only four-feet high which would not provide security. "But maybe we can get a variance for the fence height," he added.

"I'll represent you," Andrews laughed.

Types and designs of fences were discussed for some time. "I tend to think that instead of running a fence down here there are other ways fences can be used in a more creative way." He said he would show examples of that next time.

"At any rate, we don't want to make it a barricade," Andrews added.

When it came to naming Piccadilly, the consensus was that it had been known as Piccadilly (after the Piccadilly Nursery) for so long that residents are fond of the name.

BERNARD ANDERSON, a member of the Harrison Memorial Library board of trustees, said that with the construction of the library annex and its provision for public restrooms, there should be no need to have restrooms at Piccadilly. In addition, he added that restroom facilities are available at the beach and also in Carmel Plaza. "I think all that would be adequate to take care of public needs," Andersen said.

Technical discussion of what to do with the eight-foot slope of the land was discussed. Ideas included filling in low space or depressing the center of the lot to provide major drainage at that point.

Discussion included the possibility of a fountain in the park, weighed against possible drought problems and mechanical failure of fountain pumps. Most favored a fountain anyway.

Asked about the necessity of spending $50,000 allocated for landscaping the park (in addition to the $400,000 paid for the lot), Andrews replied: "I'm not out to try and spend all the money."

'If we eliminate some of the invitations to mischief, we'll be way ahead.'

Brunn named to advisory board post

Carmel entrepreneur Howard Brunn has been appointed to the board of the Management Institute of Monterey.

MIM, created last June by the Employer's Advisory Committee of the state Employment Development Department, uses volunteers from the local business community to educate Peninsula business owners and managers in contemporary management practices.

Brunn is a member of the Carmel City Council.

CV Property Owners want to be annexed to Refuse Disposal District for lower rates

THE CARMEL VALLEY Property Owners Association board of directors will petition the Board of Supervisors to annex Carmel Valley to the Monterey Peninsula Garbage and Refuse Disposal District.

Carmel Valley is included in a larger unincorporated area of Monterey County proposed for annexation to the district, which covers the Highway 68 corridor, Big Sur, Cachagua and the Carmel Highlands.

Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley plans to introduce an annexation resolution to the Board of Supervisors next month, according to his administrative aid, Steve Slade.

Passage of the resolution would refer the proposed annexation to the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) for analysis and recommendation. If fewer than 25 percent of the residents of the area proposed for annexation file protests, the directors of the garbage district can approve annexation without an election.

If protests are filed by 25 to 50 percent of the residents of the proposed annexation area, an election must be scheduled.

Dumping fees for district residents are $2.25 for up to 1,000 pounds and $3.50 for non-residents. Higher rates are scaled according to weight. Generally, non-residents pay 50 percent more for dump fees.

The CVPOA favors annexation to reduce dump fees and eventually slow increases in garbage collection fees, said CVPOA president Jack Sassard.

CVPOA directors authorized Sassard at their Aug. 12 meeting to send a letter to the Board of Supervisors asking for annexation to the district.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 81-24
AN ORDINANCE AMENDING PART X OF THE CARMEL MUNICIPAL CODE TO REGULATE FENCE HEIGHTS

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Section 1310.10 — FENCES AND WALLS — is amended to read in its entirety as follows:

1310.10 FENCES AND WALLS: With the exception of fences constructed parallel to a public street and within any required setback area adjacent to a public street, fences constructed on the property line or within any of the required setbacks (required yard area) shall not exceed a height of six feet (6') above the adjacent existing or natural grade as determined by the Building Official on the property at any point of measurement. Fences constructed parallel to a public street and within any required setback area adjacent to a public street shall not exceed a height of four feet above existing or natural grade as determined by the Building Official at any point of measurement unless permitted up to the maxiumum height of six feet by the Design Review Board. Fences within the allowed building area may be constructed to a height of ten feet (10') providing a building permit is obtained for such construction when the fence exceeds six feet (6') in height. Fences or walls constructed of other than rough or milled wood shall require the approval of the Design Review Board. The approval of the Building Inspector and Planning Director shall constitute design approval for garden walls of other than wood material where the top of such garden retaining wall does not exceed the elevation of the nearest property line, and for fences constructed chiefly of rough or milled wood that include piers of (or faced with) granite or so-called "Carmel Stone," the proportion of wood to stone being 7 to 1 or greater, measured linearly.

Section 2. If any part of this Ordinance, even as small as a word or phrase, is found unenforceable, such finding shall not affect the enforceability of any other part.

Section 3. Effective Date: This ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE SEA THIS 3rd day of August, 1981, by the following roll call vote:
AYES: COUNCILMEMBERS: ARNOLD, BROWN, LLOYD
NOES: COUNCILMEMBERS: BRUNN, LAIOLO

Potty problems

By JUDITH A. EISNER

A NUMBER OF readers have reported problems of regression with recently housebroken puppies and have asked for suggestions.

Many factors may cause a seemingly-housebroken puppy to forget his training. Among them are emotional upsets caused by moving to a new house, being boarded in a kennel where there is no requirement of house-breaking, or having a loved family member go away for a while. In other words, any disruption in the everyday routine of home life can make a puppy "forget" what's expected of him.

A related problem often occurs in older dogs, especially males, who take to "marking" door posts and walls of their home with urine. There is also the problem of the "spite wetter" who "gets even" with his owner by deliberately messing in the house when he's left alone.

The easiest problem to correct is the puppy, whose training should still be fresh in his memory.

The usual pattern of puppy regression is for the owner to awaken several mornings in a row and find that the dog has just recently relieved himself — frequently close to the door that leads outside.

Unless you catch the puppy in the act, punishment is of doubtful value. If the dog acts ashamed when you enter the room or gives any sign of knowing it's done wrong, a verbal scolding and prompt expulsion from the house are worth a try.

If you suspect that your puppy has just relieved itself before you were able to let it out, the best solution is to let it out earlier.

Set an alarm clock at least a half hour before your normal rising time. If the puppy has waited this long for you, take it out, wait until it relieves itself, and praise it lavishly. It's best to actually go outdoors with the dog in order to be able to reinforce its training by praising it.

After two or three days of early rising, push the clock ahead 10 or 15 minutes. The idea is to get the puppy trained to wait until your normal rising time. Eventually, work back to your usual hour, and if all goes well and the dog waits for you, consider yourself a success.

The mature dog who deliberately messes in the house requires stronger corrections. All male canines leave urine in "scent posts" to establish their territory. That's why male dogs have to use every tree and shrub within reach; it's an atavistic urge.

Often, introducing a new dog or cat into the house will cause an adult male to begin this territory-marking practice indoors. So will the prescence of a female in season in the vicinity. Whether or not you catch the dog in the act, a firm verbal reprimand coupled with a light spanking may convince your dog that scent posts are outdoors, not inside.

The spite wetter who resents being left alone is probably best handled by confining him in your absence. For this purpose, a dog crate is best. The dog, no matter how disgruntled at being left behind, will not want to soil his own bed and will probably resist the impulse.

People often ask if this means that they will always have to confine the dog when they leave the house. Sometimes, a spell of "imprisonment" will change the dog's ways permanently; breaking the established pattern and instituting a new pattern of behavior may have lasting effects. The only realistic answer is to give it a try. Put the dog on his honor, leave him alone and free indoors for a while and hope for the best.

Most often, when people worry about having to confine a dog, they are thinking about his watchdog abilities.

Remember that 99 percent of any dog's value as a watchdog is his barking. Very few pet dogs will go to the point of backing up that bark with a bite. The crated or confined dog can bark just as loudly as the loose dog, so don't let that aspect of confinement worry you.

With the spiteful dog, scolding or spanking usually have no effect. The dog is willfully committing a mistake; he knows what he's doing and in his canine mind, he is willing to take the punishment in return for being able to spite you.

Report from Sacramento

Some of the controversial bills now moving through legislature

By SAM FARR
Assemblyman, 28th A.D.

"Sometimes I feel I can't see the forest for the trees." So said a constituent last week who dropped in to urge my support for a particular bill in the legislature.

He was frustrated because the legislative process seems so complex and baffling. I outlined for him the basic process: A member introduces a measure; the Rules Committee of that house assigns it to an appropriate committee for review, testimony and a vote; if the measure involves any expenditure of money, it then goes to the fiscal committee for action; and, if passed, it goes to the "floor" of the house for a vote by the full house membership.

If passed, the measure goes to the other house for the whole process all over again. If the bill passes all its legislative hurdles, it goes to the governor for signature or veto. It is an elaborate system of checks and balances.

I WOULD LIKE to highlight, briefly, what is now going on in Sacramento.

On June 15 the legislature passed the budget bill on time — the first time in 10 years. The annual budget bill is the basic document which appropriates funds to keep local and state programs going. When all the hoopla died down after the budget bill was signed, it seemed as though the legislature's work was finished until next year.

Quite the contrary. Between now and Sept. 15, the 80 members of the Assembly and 40 members of the Senate will act on about 1,500 separate "bills," or proposed law changes. Some of these bills seek to remove existing laws. Others seek to add new statutes to the books. And still others seek to "amend" — or alter — existing codes.

Of the 3,000-plus bills introduced this year, many — perhaps most — are technical "clean up" measures to make the law more understandable or consistent. These are generally non-controversial changes and receive little or no attention in the media. Many of those technical bills have already sailed through the legislative process and have been signed into law, or vetoed, by the governor.

SOME OF THE MOST controversial measures are still under consideration, and the halls of the legislature are alive with constituents, lobbyists, local officials and legislators, all talking — or arguing — about the merits of various bills.

Among those most discussed this week is AB 912, which I have co-authored with Assemblyman Richard Katz. This measure would reimburse small business owners for court costs when they are wrongfully fined, cited or sued by state bureaucracies. The offending agency would have to pay the costs out of its own budget. This bill is the first step in protecting small businesses from silly and punitive regulations.

SB 215 (Foran) is the controversial bill to increase user fees — driver's license, vehicle registration, and so on — across the board. This measure has passed the Senate and is now in the Assembly.

AB 757 (Hart) is the hotly-debated proposal establishing criteria for teacher proficiency in reading, writing and basic mathematics. This measure has already passed the Assembly and is now in the Senate.

AB 653 (Torres) seeks to reform Medi-Cal by requiring that by 1984 Medi-Cal be administered under contracts with private insurance carriers. This bill, which aims to get private industry more involved in Medi-Cal administration, is currently in the Senate.

AB 541 (Moorhead) requires mandatory minimum sentences, increases fines, and provides longer jail terms for drunk drivers or persons driving under the influence of drugs. It is in the Senate — the final step in its legislative journey.

For an update, or more information, on these or any other bills, please contact my ofice, 646-1980.

Councilmen who voted for 4-foot fence height didn't listen

By BARNEY LAIOLO

NOW THAT THE situation at the proposed library annex is settled, (the council by a 4-1 vote last Monday purchased the second Thompson property on Lincoln Street), we can proceed to again work on the proposed parking facility at Sixth and Lincoln.

Discussions with the owners of the Pine Inn will continue to see if a combined use of city property and Pine Inn property can be arranged. Hopefully this will happen. However, if a workable plan cannot be accomplished we will concentrate on using only city property. Will keep you informed on these negotiations.

At this same meeting it was agreed that the number of citizens to be selected for the general plan study committee to be established at seven members with the possibility of increasing their number if the need presented itself. I again ask that persons interested in serving please contact City Hall and inform us of the area of interest they have in this regard.

One other ordinance which passed on a 3-2 vote with Brunn and Laiolo voting "No", deals with establishing the maximum height of fences facing public roads at 4 feet with provisions for added height by applying to the planning commission for a variance. I feel this is one more encroachment on property rights. I feel that citizens have a right to their privacy as well as security in their homes.

It's unfortunate that the vote went as it did and it's quite evident that the council members voting for this law failed to listen to the majority of residents as well as the planning commission members who definitely were opposed to this change.

Also if one should wish to build a fence exceeding four feet, the design and review fee is set at $25 per variance request. Another item to increase the cost of building, as if it weren't high enough!

Another point to be remembered is that all these "goodie" changes in ordinances increase the work load on the planning commission, on the staff — including the inspectors who are required to check all compliances, and impose inconveniences on the residents and builders.

Don't be surprised if a request will be forthcoming for additional personnel to meet the demands of additional required inspections as a result of these changes (i.e. building heights, ground coverage, fence heights, commercial uses under the new moratorium, etc., etc., etc.)

I think it is time to stop intruding on personal rights and stop this constant passing of more and more laws which only create more work for staff and the commissions as well as a constant frustration to the public.

One further item at last week's meeting dealt with the problems on the 4th of July. This item will be studied much more thoroughly and will be back to the council for consideration at a later date.

Beginning in October the council meetings change from Monday night to the 1st and 3rd Tuesdays. You'll be advised again later on.

Bully for Watt!

Dear Editor:

Teddy Roosevelt, John Muir and Gifford Pinchot must be rejoicing that Watt finally got the message that Californians value their coastland fishing and tourist industries more than they value the extraction of oil when there are so many less polluting alternatives such as conservation, solar, wind, bio-mass — and now we hear, natural gas — which need promotion and development.

If he can only restrain himself from tampering with our 200 million acres of forest which Teddy preserved for us, we can all rejoice.

Unless there is large scale reforestation as in Roosevelt's time, the lumber industry should stay out of our forests. Unless the huge agri-businesses pay for the subsidized irrigation water they use, 85 percent of it according to the California Monthly, January issue, as small farmers were required to do when T.R. opened up sagebrush desert land in 16 Western states with his irrigation program, the farms should be broken up into smaller sizes.

If Americans ever needed to be reminded of the greed and corruption of big business and politicians which led to the need for trustbusting legislation, it is now. It's hard to believe that Reagan and Theodore Roosevelt are in the same party.

Another gallery needed

Dear Editor:

In spite of the 60 or more art galleries in Carmel, and seemingly a new one opening every month, there is a need for one more.

As far as I can determine, none of the present galleries is willing to handle a resale. Yet the need for such an outlet arises in many ways: the death of the owner; a move to a smaller home; a change of preferences; overcrowding by new purchases, etc:

None of these situations reflects on the value of the art, which in fact often may be worth more than its original sale price.

The opportunity is there. Will someone accept the challenge?

Dr. Zam clarifies

Dear Editor:

I enjoyed the article about me by Robert Miskimon. There are, however, ambiguities and suspicious innuendos I would like to clarify.

(1.) The phrases, "He was said to be a close friend of Schoenberg and Zam recalled that he was instrumental in securing a professorship at the University of California for Arnold Schoenberg . . .," are extremely annoying to me. I showed the writer an article I wrote for the Journal of the Arnold Schoenberg Institute entitled, "How Schoenberg Came to U.C.L.A." In it was clearly stated that I was instrumental in securing a professorship for Schoenberg.

I also showed Mr. Miskimon a self-portrait given to me by Schoenberg, which I prize more than a Picasso. He was my neighbor in Hollywood. He was on my advisory board when I was director of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music. I performed and analyzed his piano works for the first time over the radio. He was my faithful fan.

In short, my friendship was anything but a superficial one. I deem it my greatest honor to have helped one of the world's greatest composers.

(2.) Quote: "The greatest enemies of music are music teachers," was not made by me, but by Schoenberg, a statement you will find in countless articles and books. Experience has taught me that it was the immutable truth.

(3.) Mozart did not start his pupils with the scale of B, as stated, (which is musical and historical nonsense,) Chopin did, as I told the writer.

(4.) Blind people do not start with B, but F# or Gb, because they can feel the black keys, which are raised and are guide posts for their keyboard orientation. Irving Berlin did very well knowing only this scale.

(5.) The ambiguity of the right key, superficially known as C, I explained in a very simple manner. If you utter the sound of the three (two, too, to), the sound will be the same but the meaning is different. By the same token, if you play the white key to the left of the two black keys, the sound is the same as (B#, C, D double flat), but the meaning is different.

Millions of students never know the difference, because elementary teachers also do not know the melodic and harmonic reasons for the different spellings.

(6.) That I taught Meade Lux Lewis to play The Rhapsody in Blue by rote, is not as dramatic as the fact that he taught me, in spite of my classical education, basic musical verities I was never taught by my great teachers.

(7.) Also, that I coached George Shearing, who is certainly much better known to contemporary jazz lovers, than Meade Lux Lewis.

(8.) I did not divorce my lovely ex-wife; but she did divorce me. We are still the best of friends.

(9.) The piano recital is usually glorification of the piano teacher. The student, to participate in a piano recital, is tied to a composition for months at the expense of ear training, harmony and the basic philosophy of scales. That this has opened up the wounds of many who have participated in such disastrous exhibitions is symbolized by the fact that Ann Landers and her sister Abby have, throughout the years, been bombarded by letters of those tortured tots of classical tyranny. This American institution has made classical music haters of their victims.

(10.) The writer failed to mention that I was the program annotator for the Hollywood Bowl.

But, don't get me wrong. Much of the article is excellently written, and I compliment the Pine Cone/Outlook for its truthful and objective reporting.

Horrors of nuclear war

Dear Editor:

Students of history know there's never been a country that produced and stockpiled weapons in the name of defense but what used them.

The recent brochure published by "Physicians for Social Responsibility" makes vivid what we human beings are in for. Imagine the reality of families anywhere vaporized with all living things on streets and in underground shelters in temperatures, not of 100 or 200 degrees Fahrenheit but, imagine, temperatures of 20 to 30 million degrees Fahrenheit in a fireball one and half miles in diameter, and this from one explosion leaving a crater several hundred feet deep. And multiply this by 50 thousand bombs, the overkill number of such bombs already produced and stockpiled by Russia and America.

At six miles from the epicenter, all people would instantly be killed by a heat flash travelling at the speed of light. Glass would melt and buildings collapse, hit by a supersonic shock-wave and winds 300 mph. Fires from oil tanks, gas lines, gasoline and LNG tanks would coalesce into a fire-storm 1200 square miles in area, cooking and asphyxiating everyone, even those in shelters.

Physicians now say medical disaster planning is meaningless, that there is no effective civil defense, that recovery from nuclear war is impossible, that world-wide fallout would contaminate the globe and its atmosphere for generations. Clearly there can be no winner in a nuclear war. And yet we "sane" Americans are now producing and stockpiling neutron bombs!

'Rashomon' outstanding

Dear Editor:

Applause to all involved in the outstanding production of Rashomon now playing at the Forest Theater in Carmel.

The stunning set alone is worth the price of admission. Against the background of misted pines, it resembled a Japanese screen. The fog played a role as well, swirling around the actors, evoking a haunting air of mystery.

The acting throughout was exemplary, with the leads giving superb performances. In her role of the wife, Lavonne Rae Andrews' handling of the intricate Japanese body language was masterful.

A tour de force. Don't miss this enthralling experience.

Government by moratorium

By AL EISNER

WHEN LOCAL GOVERNMENT fails to plan adequately to handle growth, it can resort to the ultimate weapon in its power arsenal — moratorium. By clamping a freeze on development, local elected officials hope to gain time to stem the tide.

In some instances, of course, a freeze on development is imposed from above when it becomes obvious that local jurisdictions are not doing an adequate job of planning.

The most obvious example of the latter was the stringent permit process imposed by the Coastal Commission while local governments were drawing up their versions of Local Coastal Plans in accordance with the State Coastal Act.

Another notable example is the freeze on subdivision approvals in Carmel Valley which was just extended for another year. That was caused by a lawsuit brought by the city of Carmel which pointed out that the county had erred by not preparing an environmental impact report for its newly drafted Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Meanwhile, back in the Never-Never Land of Carmel-by-the-Sea, the City Council has substituted moratorium for planning.

Alarmed by the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses in the downtown commercial district, the council slapped a freeze on expansion of existing visitor-serving businesses or creation of new ones.

Concerned that store owners were dividing their large stores into "mini-malls" or "merchandise marts," the city "moratoriumized" the practice until it could find a legal way to discourage it.

Observing that time-sharing was gaining in popularity, the city barred the practice — by moratorium — until it could study the question.

Escalating rents in the commercial district encouraged the city to try to impose a freeze on commercial rents last year. They withdrew when the city attorney advised the action was clearly illegal.

WHAT IS THE lesson we can learn from all of this? In the case of Carmel Valley, it is clear that the freeze on development was justified. The new environmental impact report deals realistically with the problems of air pollution, sewage disposal, traffic, water supply, etc. The supervisors foolishly approved the Master Plan and failed to order an EIR. That has now been remedied, but what is the anticipated result?

Development plans for more than 2,000 residential units are on file with the county planning department. When the EIR is certified and the new Master Plan adopted, will it be able to hold against the enormous pressures for additional development? That's the $64 million question.

Because the lawsuit is being carried by Alexander Henson, who was formerly with the State Attorney General's office, it appears that new restrictions on growth in Carmel Valley could stick. He knows the rules. Time will tell.

In Carmel-by-the-Sea, however, the only effective outside influence on planning is the General Plan revision process imposed by the State of California. Parking, affordable housing, transportation, access to the beach, recreation and other knotty questions have proven too difficult for the city council to handle. They either imposed moratoriums or wished the problems would disappear.

Well, moratoriums expire and tough problems do not melt away. The city is obliged now to do some real planning. The state has imposed the guidelines. Will the well-meaning amateurs on the Carmel City Council measure up to the task to meet the needs of its citizens?

When the moratorium device is exhausted, they will have to finally face up to the realities. It will be interesting to see if they can actually legislate instead of merely impose punishment.

'Humanist' editor writes

Dear Editor:

Your report of the humanist counter-attack to religious fundamentalism and extreme political conservatism was journalism with high merit.

Monterey Peninsula writers, artists and photographers in addition to those you mentioned who have contributed to this national magazine include Sherley Ashton, Allston James, Eldon Dedini, Dr. Ben I. Heller, Gen. Robert E. Coffin, Peterson Conway, Ron Widen and Winston Boyer.

Several phone callers have asked where The Humanist can be obtained locally. Well, there are the public libraries. Several bookstores which stock magazines have it, as well as a few select magazine stands.

It might be rewarding to check the reading table of a thoughtful friend. A growing number of individuals are tiring of the gloom and doom of much of the media coming from the Eastern Establishment.

The Humanist focuses on lively constructive alternatives. After all, the human race is only beginning to catch its "second wind."

Hidden Valley says 'thanks'

A belated but sincere thank you to the Pine Cone/Outlook and in particular to Terri Lee Robbe for your help in publicizing the Carmel Decorators Show House sponsored by the Friends of Hidden Valley last month.

The response by the whole community to Hidden Valley's financial plight was deeply appreciated.

Traffic at Crossroads

Dear Editor:

Two cheers for Bud Clark and The Crossroads!

Florence Mason's report in "Business Beat," August 13, made me feel much better after recently waiting in a line up of cars extending south of Carmel River bridge going north on Highway 1, and then waiting in another line trying to get out onto Rio Road from Safeway east of Highway 1, then waiting again in a line up on Rio Road heading west (after having to first turn east on Rio Road, then making a "U" turn to enter the queue going west.)

When a person can solve traffic problems like we have at the Rio Road-Highway 1 intersection by simply using his brains, and also figure out how to add 80 shops with space for up to 967 cars to that area, and at the same time take a shower, my hat goes off to him!

The third cheer comes after Bud Clark's next shower, when he thinks again, "what the hell?"

Some commissioners chafe at rebuffs from council

By BABS COROVESSIS

SERVING ON A BOARD or commission in Carmel in an advisory capacity has its frustrations — the biggest of which can be coping with the City Council.

Recommendations of the boards are often thrown out or reversed by the City Council.

One example was the Carmel Planning Commission's determination that six-foot fences were all right, and that the ordinance regulating fences should be left alone.

An insistent City Council sent the measure back to the planners for more study, recommending four-foot fences.

"Yes, it's frustrating. And no, it's not. The more involved I get, the less frustrated I get. I get hardened to it. That's just the system, and by and large I wouldn't want to change the system," said Bob Stephenson, chairman of the planning commission.

Stephenson said the commission might study a certain issue for one or two years. "And it's happened that the City Council has thrown it (the issue) out in five minutes," he added.

Stephenson pointed out that he has come to understand that "the City Council is dealing with different problems than any of its other commissions. Each individual commission is charged with a particular narrow scope, and they try to solve those problems as best they can. But the City Council has to look at not just the solution but the whole town and the traditions of the town. So, when the City Council takes all this into consideration, they sometimes come up with different solutions."

Stephenson recalled that the planning commission had drawn up a transient rental ordinance with exceptions. Stephenson said the council threw out all the exceptions when it passed the ordinance. "If they had left them in, it might have stood up better in court," Stephensen said.

ONE EXAMPLE of an agency looking at a narrow view of a matter and the council taking in a broader scope has to do with the breaks in the center island walk-throughs remaining on Ocean Avenue in the middle of the blocks, Stephenson said.

The traffic committee (including Police Chief Ellis) favored closing the walk-throughs, primarily for safety factors.

"But the City Council looks at walk-throughs as one of the old traditions in the town," Stephenson said, recalling the council vote in August to leave the walk-throughs open.

"I've been on the planning commission for five years. Sure, there is a little bit of frustration. It's a bureucratic system; that's the way it is so there is no need to get upset about it," Stephenson added.

THE TRAFFIC COMMITTEE discussed its role and its relationship to the City Council at its Aug. 6 meeting.

"I have to be reminded that the traffic committee is strictly advisory," said Florence Mason, chairman of the committee.

Recommendations based primarily on concerns for public safety have been negated by the City Council, she said.

"It is frustrating, also, when the council, with no acknowledgement of the work done by the committee, makes its own survey of some situation already studied by the committee appointed to advise it. It is not only frustrating, but inefficient," Mrs. Mason said.

Two examples of traffic committee recommendations disregarded by the council are two street name signs at each corner, and the closure of Ocean Avenue walk-throughs for safety factors.

To iron out its role in relation to the City Council, the traffic committee agreed to send a memorandum to the council asking for clarification of the committee's role.

31st Concours d'Elegance Sunday

The 31st annual Concours d'Elegance — a display of antique and classic cars — is scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 23 at Pebble Beach.

This year the number of entries should set a new record — the Pebble Beach Corporation, which sponsors the event, reports an "overwhelming" number of entries.

Last year the event drew 125 cars and a record crowd of between 12 and 13,000 people for the 16 classes of competition.

Among the confirmed entries are a 1932 Pierce Arrow convertible sedan from Texas, a 1933 Hispano-Suiza J12 Vanvooren drophead coupe, a 1931 Lincoln K. LeBaron convertible, a 1931 Duesenberg Victoria coupe, a 1930 Delage, and a 1930 Dusenberg Murphy convertible sedan.

The show will include a feature class on Cunninghams and at least 15 Hispano-Suizas.

The Concours will take place on the lawn at the Lodge at Pebble Beach. All cars will be in place by 10 a.m. for judging. Awards will be presented at 2 p.m.

Those selected for excellence will "take the ramp" and final judging, for the Best of Show award, will be at 4 p.m.

Tickets are $10 each and can be purchased at the gates to Pebble Beach or at the field. There is no charge for children under 15. There is a $4 per vehicle entry fee at the gate.

Net proceeds will go to the United Way of the Monterey Peninsula and Pebble Beach Foundation charities.

Judging for the Concours will be conducted in "English" as opposed to "American." For example, a "drophead" in English is a convertible, a saloon is a sedan, a wing is a fender, a windscreen is a windshield and a boot is a trunk. A silencer is a muffler, the dynamo is the generator, the bonnet is the hood and, of course, petrol is gasoline. A lorry is a truck and a squab is a car seat.

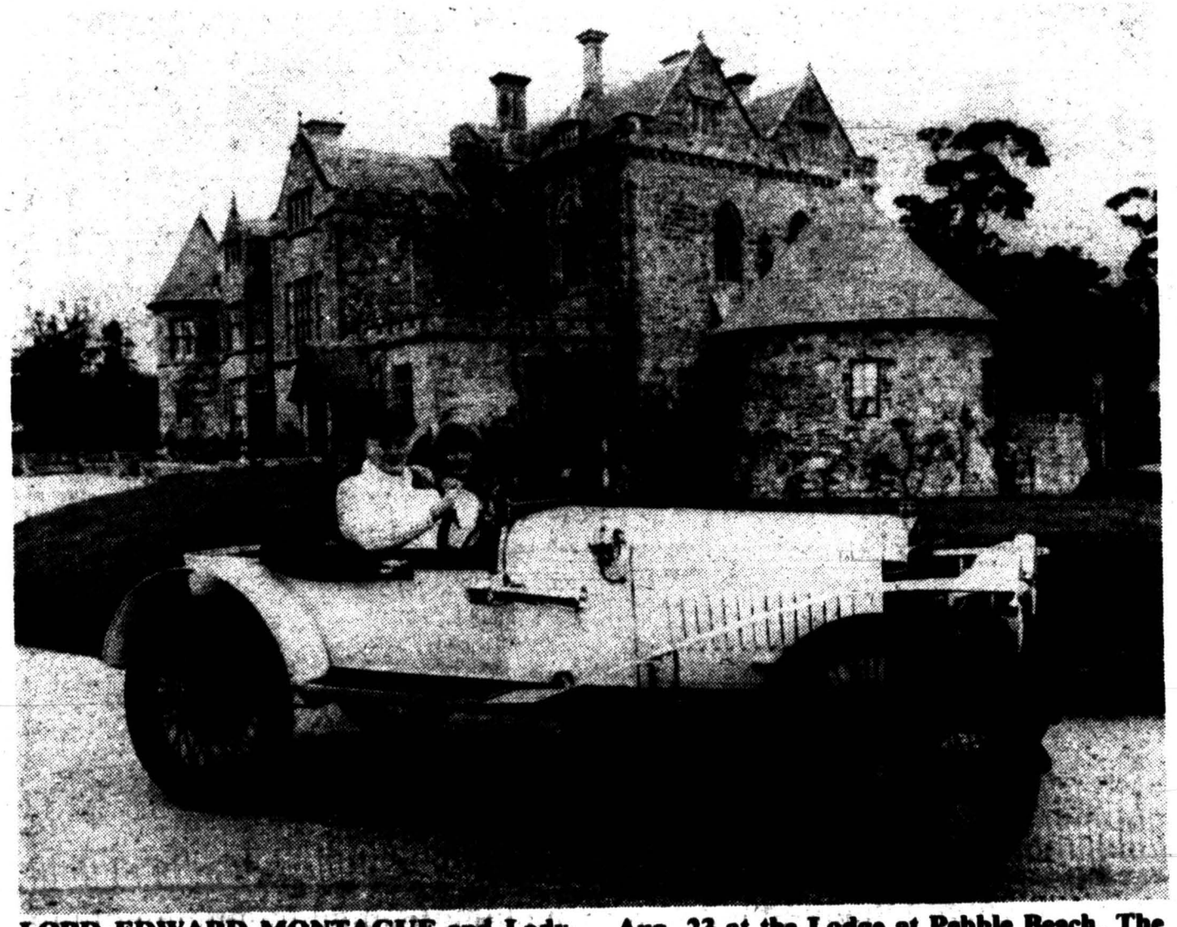
Heading the judging panel is Strother MacMinn of Pasadena, a designer for Toyota. Photographer Ansel Adams will be an honorary judge, as will Gordon Buehrig from Grosse Point, Mich. Buehrig was the chief body designer for Duesenberg.

Other honorary judges include Marcus Clary, general manager of Mercedes-Benz, Stanley Sedgwick, president of the Bently Drivers' Club, Lord Edward Montague, whose antique auto collection now rests in the National Motor Museum in England.

Alec Ulmann, founder of the Sebring races in Florida will be a judge, as will Briggs Cunningham, who owns his own auto museum in Costa Mesa.

Winning cars at the event last year included a 1933 SJ Rollston Torpedo sedan, a 1931 Pierce Arrow 41 LeBaron sports sedan and 1937 Delahaye 135 M Figoni et Falaschi Cabriolet.

For more information phone 649-8500.



LORD EDWARD MONTAGUE and Lady Montague in their 1913 Hispano Suiza outside their home in Beaulieu, England. Lord Montague will be an honorary judge at the 31st annual Concours d'Elegance Sunday, Aug. 23 at the Lodge at Pebble Beach. The Montagues shipped the car to San Francisco and will drive it down to Pebble Beach for the show.

Paintings of vintage cars

Eberts exhibit to open Saturday

A one-man show of paintings of vintage cars by Ken Eberts will be presented by the Miner's Gallery Americana Saturday, Aug. 22.

There will be a reception for the artist that day at 4 p.m. at the gallery, at Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel.

The unusual watercolor paintings make appropriate vehicles for a retrospective journey into the history of the United States. Eberts has developed and continues to perfect a style and technique that are entirely unique and skillfully executed. It is only through careful study that the artist can represent the detail of his paintings with such authenticity.

Eberts was born in New York City. He received his formal art training at New York's High School of Music and Art and the Los Angeles Art Center College of Design, where he earned a Bachelor of Professional Arts Degree with a major in transportation design. He was an automobile body designer for Ford Motor Company in Dearborn, Michigan.

Early in 1969 he focused on fine art and began painting full time. At his first public showing at the 1969 Lake San Marcos Art Invitational he received a first place award and was brought to the attention of the art world. He has won many awards since then — including First Place in Watercolor Competition at the Chriswood Art Invitational at Rancho California seven times, including the coveted "Artists Award" in 1978.

His paintings have been used as note cards, stationery and Christmas cards by Leanin' Tree Publishing Company and have been featured in Los Angeles Magazine, Southwest Art, Arizona Living, Car Classics Magazine, the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner "California Living" and many other publications. He has been featured on ABC Television's "Eyewitness News,' and he has also appeared with his work on San Diego's "Sun Up" TV show.

The gallery is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information phone 624-5071.

Mariachi band to play at Forest

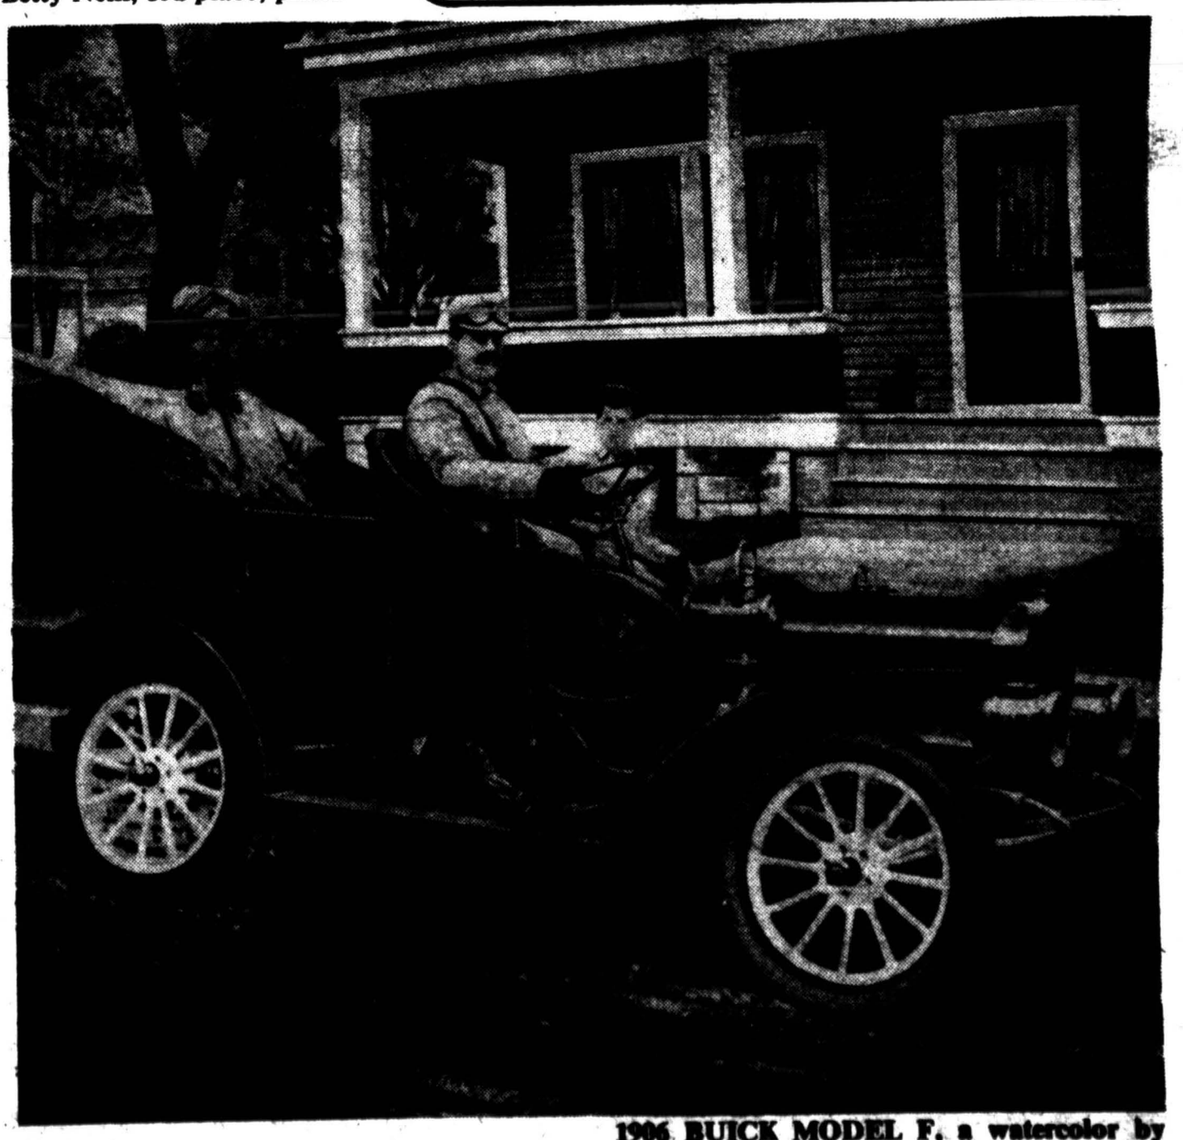
El Mariachi Mixtlan de la Bahia de Monterey will make their second appearance at the outdoor Forest Theater Sunday, Aug. 23 at 2 p.m.

The group is composed of musicians from the Monterey Bay area who have studied and performed mariachi music in Mexico City, Guadalajara, Berkeley, and Santa Cruz. They perform traditional music from Mexico — the son, cancion, ranchera, bolero, polka, waltz, jarabe, and the less traditional cumbia (a dance originally from Colombia but now popular throughout Mexico) and the huapango, an exciting and interesting syncopated song featuring harp or violin solos.

They will play violins, trumpets, guitar, vijuela (the guitar-like, five stringed rhythm instrument), and the guitarron, the bass instrument with six strings. They also feature the arpa Jalisciense or harp from Jalisco. They dress in the traditional — "traje de Mariachi" costume, with botonadura, sombrero de charro, cinturon, and matching ties.

For the past three years, Mariachi Mixtlan have appeared at the Pastorellas and Posadas in Monterey. They have also performed at the Carmel Mission Fiesta, the Salinas Rodeo, the Jerry Lewis Telethon, the Coalicion in Watsonville, and many Cinco de Mayo celebrations.

The Forest Theater is at Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel. Admission is free. For more information phone 624-3996.



1906 BUICK MODEL F, a watercolor by Ken Eberts, is one of a collection of works by the artist which will be exhibited from Aug. 22 through Sept. 6 at the Miner's Gallery Americana, 6th and Lincoln, Carmel. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

1981 County Fair has entertainment for all ages

Bob Hope is the star attraction at the Monterey County Fair, which continues until Sunday, Aug. 23.

Hope will appear Sunday at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in the Pattee Arena. Tickets are $10 reserved and $8 general and are available at the fairgrounds box office at Fairgrounds and Garden roads in Monterey and at BASS outlets.

In addition to the Pattee Arena there will be three other stages on the fairgrounds — the Bonanza, the Wagon Wheel and the Medicine Wagon.

All performances on all three stages are free.

Among the groups to appear are Montezuma's Revenge, a group which combines country, rock and roll, jazz and folk music, and Alabama, who recorded the country music hits Tennessee River and Why, Lady, Why, and a local group, Rainbow.

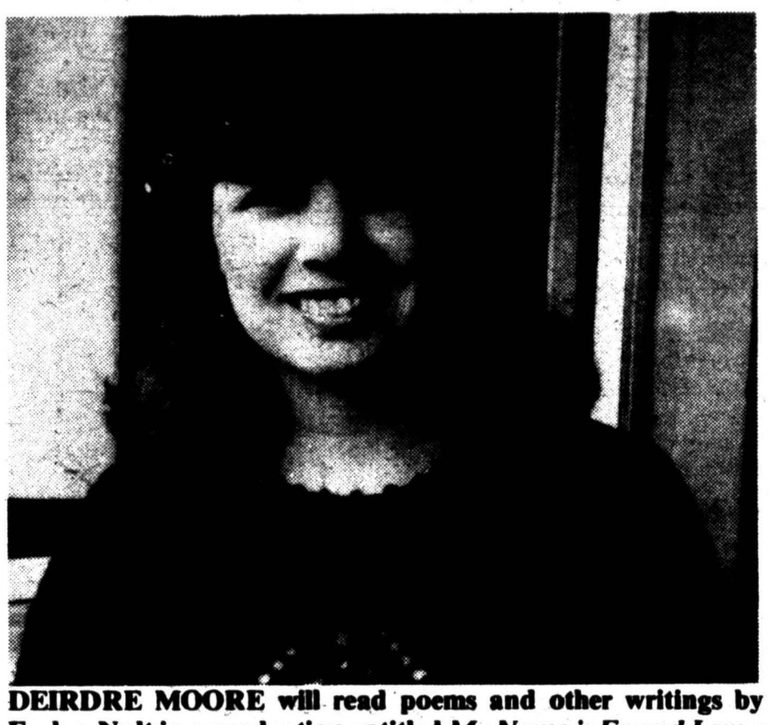
Among local groups appearing on these three stages are the U.S. Gymnastics Academy, the Desert Fire Dance Troupe, the Pauline Hall dance troup, singer-guitarist Michael Scopes, and juggler David Cohen.

Once again the fair will offer hundreds of carnival rides, games of chance, and of course every type of food imaginable.

There will be crafts, floral, photography and art exhibits and, of course, livestock and agricultural exhibits.

Parking is limited and fairgoers are urged to use carpools or take the bus.

Monterey Salinas Transit buses will be passing by the fairgrounds ten times each hour. Fares are 50 cents from the Peninsula, and $1 from Salinas and Carmel Valley. Exact change is required. Fairgoers should contact MST at 899-2557 or 424-7695 for information on schedules and bus stop locations. There will be no MST service during evening hours.



DEIRDRE MOORE will read poems and other writings by Evelyn Nolt in a production entitled My Name is Ev and I am a Star Walker, directed by Philippa Hastings. The production will run Saturday, Aug. 22 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 23 at 3 p.m. in Cherry Hall, Guadalupe and 4th, Carmel. A donation will be requested at the door. For reservations and information phone 624-7491.

Free concerts scheduled at The Barnyard

The following free concerts will be offered at the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel:

Friday, Aug. 21 Peter Meuse, banjo 12-3 p.m.;

Saturday, Aug. 22, Gray Felts and Pat Clarke, concertina and mandolin, 12-3 p.m.

Sunday, Aug. 23 Glenn Tinturin, classical guitarist, 12-3 p.m.

For more information phone 624-8842.

Forest Theater Guild to hold auditions

The Forest Theater Guild will hold auditions for three plays Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 25 and 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

The plays are Patrick Garrick's The Lying Valet, Barrie's The Twelve Pound Look and Noel Coward's Blythe Spirit.

For more information phone 624-1531.

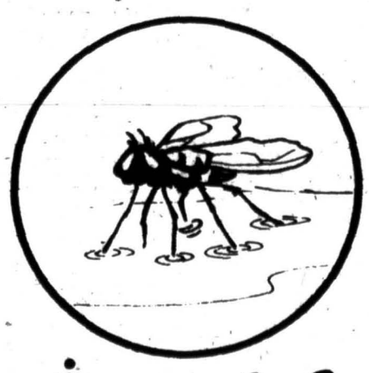
THE FLY



in the

OINTMENT

a new book by

MARION HART PRATT

Life, as man lives it, is one big disappointment. Getting the fly out of the ointment, is what happens when you don't know anything. Man will dispute this. This is where the fly comes in. Down through the ages, much has been said, written and taught as the way to get the fly out, or the way to get to heaven. Baseball has added to this storehouse of knowledge. When a fly ball is caught, "You're out!" This is what is often called instant enlightenment.

The book,* "THE FLY IN THE OINTMENT," *is Marion Pratt's version of how best to get caught. Humor and poking fun at old standbys on which the fly keeps building its little house, is one way to go. (That doesn't mean getting somewhere.) Discovering what the fly is all about is discovering HEAVEN, with no opposite. Not tomorrow, but the minute it is seen. Surprised illumination is best summed up in the book's own words: "The best way to find a needle in a haystack, is to sit on it."

Reaganomics: the arts as a frill

By RICHARD TYLER

ALTHOUGH THE CHIPS in the budget cutting "game" of the Reagan Administration are dollars, and although there is no question about the seriousness of inflation, the world situation and economic crunch, the name of the game is "Valuing the Qualities of American Life." Are we on the road to becoming a Sparta rather than an Athens? I used to think this question was faced by a nation every 20 years or 60 years or 120 years, but I'm beginning to think we may face it every day.

If the Reagan administration were only after dollars in the billions, they certainly wouldn't have whacked the National Endowments for the Arts and Humanities while taking pride that they didn't cut them out altogether. Or taken the Arts Education budget and propose putting it into Block Grants for the states. (That's similar to distributing the players in the National and American baseball leagues to the states to beef up the quality of baseball in the minor leagues. It just doesn't work that way.)

It is clear that the Reagan administration still thinks of the arts as a frill, despite the Lou Harris polls. The administration is entitled to its opinions, and naturally should attempt to carry them out in executive action, but, in the arts case, it's hardly for the reason of saving big bucks.

Of course, the National Endowment for the Arts and the Humanities should take its share of cuts, assuming the arts will, in fact, reduce inflation. The current budget is less than $200 million. $500 million would still be far from footing the whole bill. I think there should be a ceiling. Federal funds are an assist and a national model — not funding of first resort.

But why should we worry? Except for such programs as the Arts Education program theater, people aren't immediately threatened. There are at least two compelling answers to that: A — students and other aspirants who grow up would have even fewer places to find work and B — citizens and taxpayers would be given the signal from a "national model" that the arts really are frills and should be left to die at the state and local level as well as the federal.

The above is a response at the practical level. At the level of values in American life, the reason to keep the endowments going as an effective force is that of adhering to our "pursuit of happiness." That certainly shows that our forefathers thought the quality of life was a matter of federal concern.

We will continue to promote the arts and arts education at the municipal level for the tradition is established among us. But how do we go about educating those who now find even less reason to be concerned about the qualities of life around us? These are questions we will have to continue to ask ourselves and to work with if we are to continue to bring the enrichment of a cultural life into our community.

LEO KOTTKE, guitarist and composer, will perform Saturday, Aug. 22, at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth in Carmel. Kottke is considered to be one of the best acoustic guitarists in the world today.

Leo Kottke to perform here Aug. 22

Guitarist and composer Leo Kottke will perform his bright and original melodies Saturday Aug. 22, at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

Kottke's guitar mastery has brought him a receptive, loyal audience. He has earned many awards, inlcuding Guitar Player magazine's "Best Acoustic Guitarist" for the past five consecutive years; "Best Instrumentalist Award for 1976 by Performance magazine; the German Grammy Award in 1977 for "Best Instrumentalist"; and the 1978 Italian Press Award for "Best Instrumentalist."

His music was featured in the Academy Award-winning film, Days of Heaven.

He plays alone on stage with two 12-string guitars — one tuned for slide — and a classical six-string guitar. In addition to his original compositions, Kottke plays songs by Buddy Holly, Jorma Kaukonen, Ry Cooder and The Sons of the Pioneers.

As a child, Kottke never stayed long in one place. His family lived in Georgia, California, Michigan, Wyoming, Oklahoma and Virginia. He feels that the early years made a definite imprint on his music. "Every couple of years we moved somewhere else and that was really exciting. But when I got older, I realized I'd really never moved in anywhere. That feeling is easy to bring out of a guitar."

He began playing the violin at age five and learned to play the flute and trombone before he finally picked up the guitar. Kottke is a self-taught musician and that, he feels, makes him eccentric. "I've got that sort of tunnel vision that you get from not being very educated. I'm strictly a solo, eccentric musician."

Tickets for the concert are on sale at Carmel Music; Do Re Mi Records in The Barnyard, Carmel; Recycled Records Monterey; Gadsby's, Salinas; and Cymbaline Records, Santa Cruz. Tickets are $8 and $9.

The concert is sponsored by Rochelle Productions.

More praise for The Whaling Station Inn

From "Where to Eat in America" by William Rice, Food Editor, Washington Post and Burton Wolf. Their current diners' guide:

WORTH IT

Whaling Station Inn, 763 Wave Street, one block above Cannery Row, Monterey (373-4248). In an area where dining establishments are a big deal both in price and size, here is a really well-run restaurant that lives up to its PR. The decor is of a whaling station at the end of the 19th century. Features steaks and fish broiled on a grill over oak wood and grape cuttings. The result is magnificent. Try salmon if it is in season. Reservations suggested. Open seven days a week. Complete dinners from $9.95.

Excerpt from New West Mag. 1/'80 Restaurants, by Sandra Rosenzweig:

The Whaling Station Inn, right above Cannery Row, showcases the county's abundant seafood, green vegetables and excellent wines, and it adds panache to quality. Even before they have ordered, each pair of diners is presented with a Castroville artichoke drizzled with vinaigrette and topped with mayonnaise.

...Most of the entrees are cooked over an open-hearth grill, and they tend to be whatever is fresh and local.

On the creative, four-page wine list, devoted entirely to California wines, Monterey County wines take up two pages. Entrees run from $9.95 to $14.95.

Excerpt from Cuisine Mag. 1/'80 by William Rice

The Whaling Station Inn, a full-scale restaurant on Wave Street, is just above John Steinbeck's old haunts.

From his Italian heritage, owner John Pisto brought a fondness for olive oil, garlic, fresh vegetables and a conviction that copious portions are what everyone expects.

Perhaps the prize exhibit in the kitchen he finished two years ago this month is a sizable pit grill fueled by oak wood. It is used for steak, of course, but even more often for fish. Local fish, some of which Pisto catches himself, gets top billing with the famed Monterey Bay prawns, a special treat when available during fall and winter months.

The restaurant succeeds, he feels, because "we don't try to overreach ourselves. We're very unpretentious. We don't try to hide the foods. They are what they are."

An ounce of prevention

Salt and high blood pressure

By RALPH RETHERFORD, M.D.

SOMEHOW, THE PAST several months have slipped by and I have never gotten around to talking about salt, one of the things most Americans realize they should start cutting back on.

Why are so many public health organizations recommending that Americans cut down their salt intake? The reason is there are over 60 million people in the United States who have high blood pressure. This ranks high blood pressure as one of our foremost public health problems, and as you may be aware, high blood pressure is one of the leading risk-factors for heart attack and stroke.

Naturally we would like to cut down the amount of high blood pressure in America. What is the first thing that every doctor tells his patient with high blood pressure before he puts him on medicine? "Go on a low salt diet."

Will this cure his high blood pressure? Not necessarily, but many people who have mild elevation of their blood pressure will fall back into the normal range merely by restricting their salt intake.

Let's explore the relationship between salt in the diet and high blood pressure.

As we look around the world at different cultures, in general the more salt that there is in a diet, the more high blood pressure is present. For instance, in Northern Japan where they have the highest salt intake in the world, they have the highest rates of high blood pressure and stroke in the world.

If we take people in our country with high blood pressure and put them on low salt diets, the majority of them will have a significant reduction in their blood pressure. So we see that in the roughly 20 percent of our population that is susceptible to high blood pressure, the problem could be prevented in most of these people simply by avoiding salt.

HOW MUCH SALT does the average American eat in a day? The average American eats 12-16 grams of salt in his diet daily. How much does your body need? One half a gram or less. So, you see that we are taking a tremendous excess of salt into our bodies all of the time. The average American eats 20-40 times as much salt as he needs every day!

If we stop adding salt to our food but continue eating a normal amount of processed foods, our salt intake goes down to about five grams a day. If you have a blood pressure problem and you are trying to control your blood pressure by restricting salt, it is a good idea to get your salt intake under two grams a day. This means avoiding most processed foods as nearly all of these contain high amounts of salt, and partaking of restaurant food only occasionally as nearly all food served in restaurants will be relatively high in salt.

How do you accomplish getting your salt intake down to two grams a day? Of course, the first thing that you will need to do is to stop adding salt to your food. You may substitute any of the commercially available salt substitutes except for any that contain sodium. Potassium-containing substitutes are acceptable.

This is the point at which cutting your salt intake down becomes a challenge, because you will have to educate yourself as to which processed foods are high in sodium.

I am going to give you a partial list of some of the most commonly overlooked high-salt items. High salt beverages include buttermilk, diet sodas, V-8 juice, and tomato juice. Any significant intake of these will torpedo your low salt diet attempts.

High salt dietary products include most cheeses, cottage cheese and particularly parmesan cheese (wouldn't you know it, the best one). High salt meats include bacon, bologna, salami, corned beef, hot dogs, sausage, and any other prepared or processed meat.

Other items include dill pickles — one of the most concentrated sources of salt available in our diet — canned foods in general, canned meats such as tuna or sardines, canned or packaged soups, most salad dressings unless labeled low-sodium, and some frozen vegetables such as frozen peas. A more complete list can be obtained through your personal physician or by writing your local chapter of the American Heart Assn.

MANY PEOPLE say "Oh, but I am really active and I sweat a lot so I need a lot of salt." This is a much-propagated myth and is totally untrue. The fact is that you have to sweat over three gallons of sweat in a 24 hour period before you have to take any extra salt into your body.

This means if you are working out in the sun and you are really sweating up a storm and you find that you have to drink more than 48 glasses of water in one day, then by all means, eat something salty. If you are only requiring 32 glasses of water a day you will do just fine on the low salt diet. This is because perspiration is almost pure water and actually has very little salt in it. The reason your skin tastes salty after you perspire a lot is because what small amounts of salt are in the sweat are left in the skin as the sweat evaporates and becomes concentrated there.

What about runners taking salt tablets? The last thing that your body needs when it becomes dehydrated is salt tablets. What happens as you sweat is that your body fluids become more salty. Your blood is a salt solution, and as you sweat almost no salt is removed from the body, but relatively large amounts of water can be removed from the body.

This means that the blood becomes saltier and saltier the more you exercise. What you need to replace as this happens is water, not salt. This is why your body makes you thirsty and tells you to drink water. I have yet to see a person who is thirsty get any satisifaction from going to a salt lick.

ONE LAST POINT about salt. There are some who feel that taking in more salt than your body needs is probably bad for the body. The only direct evidence that I know of that supports this are reports from some people who have migrain headaches that going on low salt diets helped their headaches; reports from peple with arthritis that avoiding salty foods tends to help their arthritic pains; and cross-cultural correlations between high salt diets and cancer of the stomach. If you are perfectly healthy, don't have high blood pressure or any of these other problems, you can probably get away with eating a fair amount of salt in your diet.

My advice, however, is that everyone should try to stop adding salt to their food and try to avoid processed foods that are high in salt.

Backgammon

Keep the threat

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 5-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

Don't safety the blot by moving from Black's 1-point to his 3-point. Keep that man there as a threat.

If Black rolls 6-4 or 6-3, he must leave a blot on his 2-point or hit you and leave a blot on his 1-point. If he rolls a 6-2, he must either leave a blot in his home board or come out of your board, leaving a blot on your 9-point and a blot all alone in your home board.

If you move to his 3-point, he can safely leave a blot behind you.

Instead, take the entire roll from your midpoint to your 6-point. Leave a blot on your midpoint instead of on your 11-point in case Black rolls 6-2 and decides to come out of your board. It will be easier to hit him if you need a four (15 chances out of 36) than if you need a two (only 12 chances out of 36).

If Black doesn't get an awkward roll you will use your next two to move to his 3-point, from where you can eventually get out of his board without giving up your point. There is no tremendous rush about doing this, however, since you should have three or four comfortable rolls before you have to do something about the man on Black's 1-point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Young actors to stage musical

Summer Lark School of Performing Arts will present Gilbert and Sullivan's Trial by Jury Wednesday, Aug. 26 at 8 p.m. at the Carmel Sunset Center.

A special matinee performance will be given Thursday, Aug. 27 at 2:30 p.m. The performance is free to senior citizens.

Trial by Jury stars Lori Didion as the plaintiff, Mike Romero as the defendant, Michael Patterson as the usher, Donald Dally as the counsel and Tommy Doud as the judge. The musical, set in Victorian England, is a series of comical events in a courtroom when a young lady sues her former betrothed for breach of contract when he refused to marry her.

The musical is directed by Rudy Rafanelli, musical direction is by Robin Pease, and piano accompaniment will be provided by Karl Rubrecht. Local theater artists Alan Gilbert, Ellen Collard and Gina Welch have been guest instructors in the workshop.

Summer Lark is a non-profit organization dedicated to giving children instruction in dance, drama and music, in a workshop setting, with the project culminating in the presentation of a standard work of the musical theater. In previous years the group has presented Hans Christian Anderson and The Wizard of Oz.

Tickets are $2 and may be obtained at the door, at the Apple Pie Bookstore in Monterey or by writing Summer Lark at P.O. Box 221862, Carmel, 93922 or by calling 659-4720.

The play will also run Friday and Saturday, Aug. 28 and 29 at 8 p.m. For more information phone 659-4720 or Karl Rubrecht at 373-6613.

Cook's Club to offer classes / demonstrations

The Cooks Club at the Peppercorn restaurant in the Barnyard will offer two free cooking demonstrations and two classes the week of Thursday, Aug. 20 to Wednesday, Aug. 26.

On Thursday, Aug. 20 the club will offer a class in low calorie cuisine — Russian cabbage borsht, Athenian salad, filet of sole, marinated chicken, braised cauliflower and a Mexican custard.

Wine and low calorie punch will be served during the class, which begins at 10:30 a.m. The cost of the class and the meal is $13 per person.

On Saturday, Aug. 22, the club will give a free demonstration of the preparation of enchiladas from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1-3 p.m. The preparation of eggplant dishes will be demonstrated at the same times Sunday.

The second class — on Indian cuisine — is scheduled for Monday, Aug. 24.

The class will deal with the making of chapati (bread), chicken curry, sweet and sour prawns, rice and red lentils with peas, onions and spices, a spinach dish, yogurt with cucumbers, and pineapple chutney.

The class begins at 4:30 p.m. and dinner is served at 8 p.m. The cost is $15.

The Peppercorn restaurant is at the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel. For more information phone 625-0100.

Sierra Clubbers plan hike

An afternoon walk through Del Monte Forest is scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 23 by the Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club.

The five-mile walk will take hikers through the forest, to the beach and back through Asilomar.

Bring a light beverage. Meet at the David Avenue School in Pacific Grove at 1:30 p.m.

For more information phone 372-6374 or 659-2887 evenings.

Storytellers meet

Hundreds of storytellers are expected to attend a symposium on the art of telling a good story Saturday, Sunday and Monday Aug. 22-24 at the Asilomar Conference Center in Pacific Grove.

Organized by the American Storytelling Resource Center, Inc., an international nonprofit organization with headquarters in Santa Cruz, the symposium will include a storytelling, open to the public, Saturday, Aug. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Asilomar Chapel Theater.

Admission to the two-hour show will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for school-aged children at the door.

The conference center is at 800 Asilomar Ave. For more information phone Santa Cruz at 475-8939.

Library plans end of summer youth events

Frank Connolly, a former F.B.I. agent and a polygraph expert, will be the concluding speaker in the series of programs offered by Harrison Memorial Library in connection with the Library Intelligence Agency Summer Reading Club. He will speak on Friday, Aug. 21 at 10 a.m. at the Library at Ocean and Lincoln, Carmel.

Both summer reading clubs — the Bertram Bookworm and the L.I.A. — will conclude with a movie and refreshments on Tuesday Aug. 25 from 1:30-3:30 p.m. in Carpenter Hall, room 20 on the Mission Street side of Sunset Center.

The film, The Backstreet Six is a fast-paced, entertaining film starring six kids whose summer adventures send them laughing through the backstreets of the city. Club members are asked to bring cookies.

Badges will be presented to those boys and girls who have achieved Super Agent status by reading at least 20 books this summer.

PORCH, a watercolor by Joan Murphy, is part of a collection by the artist which will go on exhibit Saturday, Aug. 22 at the Zantman Galleries, 6th and Dolores, Carmel. The exhibit will remain until Sept. 6. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information phone 624-8314.

Reception to open Murphy exhibit

The Zantman Art Galleries will present an exhibition of paintings by Joan Murphy Saturday, Aug. 22.

There will be a reception for the artist that day at 5 p.m. at the galleries at 6th and Mission.

The "message" in Joan Murphy's paintings is an invitation to enjoy a few tranquil hours of a balmy summer afternoon sipping cool drinks on a terrace overlooking the Bay. Masses of potted plants, vases of casually arranged garden flowers and, in the background, luxuriant trees and shrubbery give the enchanting place its special ambiance. White wicker chairs offer comfort and relaxation. The viewer is drawn into this serene environment and is soothed by it.

Though Joan Murphy now lives and paints in California in surroundings much like those described above, she grew up in the deep South. Hence the legendary southern hospitality that is reflected in her recent paintings.

Joan Murphy has been represented by the Zantman galleries since 1975 and her success and popularity have grown steadily since then. This is her fourth one-woman show at Zantman.

The galleries are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information phone 624-8314.

Watercolorist to give free demonstration Friday

Artist David Allan of Carmel will give a free public demonstration of his watercolor techniques in Seaside City Hall Council Chamber 440 Harcourt Ave. on Friday, Aug. 21 at 7:30 p.m., sponsored by the Seaside Art Commission.

Allan received his B.A. in 1972 from the University of California at Santa Barbara and his teaching credentials from Monterey Institute of International Studies. He has visited England, France, Greece, Cyprus, Mexico, Hong Kong, Korea, Japan, and the Philippine Islands during his studies.

His works have been exhibited at the Monterey County Fair, Artist Response Gallery, Artist Palette Gallery, D. Logan Hill Gallery, S.F.B. Morse Gallery, Thunderbird Book Store, Ft. Ord and Presidio of Monterey galleries.

His watercolors won first place at the Seaside Art Competitive in 1978 and 1980, an award from the 1977 Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art Competitive and an award from the 1977 Pacific Grove Watercolor Competitive.

He is a member of the Central Coast Art Association and currently teaches art at the Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Center.

Reception planned for artist

Brown's Barn in the Carmel Plaza will sponsor a reception for Oakland artist Nancy MacLeod Saturday, Aug. 22 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The public is welcome.

A graduate of the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, MacLeod makes what she describes as "crazy dresses with stuffed parts and lots of hand-stitched appliques."

Samples of her appliqued dresses, jumpers, vests and jackets will be at the store. For more information phone 624-4747.

THIS DESIGN OF AN APPLIQUED KIMONO is one of the works of artist Nancy MacLeod, who will be at Brown's Barn Saturday, Aug. 22 at 11 a.m. for a reception in her honor. Examples of her hand-appliqued clothing will be at the store. The public is welcome.

New state park guide is available

A new guide to the state park system is now available for $2, including tax and postage, from Department of Parks and Recreation, P.O. Box 2390, Sacramento, Calif. 95811. Checks should be made payable to Department of Parks and Recreation.

The guide lists, locates, and describes 236 California state parks, reserves and recreation areas.

On one side of the folder is a large map of California showing the locations of the state park units in relation to major cities, highways, rivers, lakes, and some national parks. Indicators show which state parks have campgrounds.

The other side lists the state park units alphabetically and gives a capsule description of each, with map locations and indicators for camping, picnicking, fishing, hiking, swimming, horse riding, boating exhibits, food service, camping supplies, and trailer sanitation stations.

State parks that have group picnic areas, group campgrounds, equestrian campgrounds, wheelchair-accessible campsites, environmental campsites and boating facilities are listed separately.

The folder describes the various kinds of campsites and gives tips on camping, park regulations, notes on state historic parks and landmarks, and general information on the state park system. It also has special notes on the new state railroad museum and the Asilomar Conference Grounds in Pacific Grove.

Crafton studied at the Pratt Institute and Art Students League under Reginald Marsh. Her naive works exude a nostalgic charm and evocative whimsy, uniquely her own. Crafton's works are in numerous private and corporate collections, including Crocker Bank in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Youth orchestra to give concert

The Hidden Valley Summer Youth Orchestra will present its second free public concert on Sunday, Aug. 23, at 8 p.m. in the Sunset Theatre in Carmel.

Under the baton of conductor Stewart Robertson, the Youth Orchestra will perform the overture to The Wasps by Vaughn Williams, a symphonic poem, Les Eolides, by C. Franck and the Sinfonietta by Poulenc. The final concert will be held Saturday, Aug. 29 at 8 p.m. in the Sunset Center in Carmel. Henry Holt from Seattle Opera will serve as guest conductor.

The Hidden Valley Summer Youth Orchestra is comprised of talented, high school-aged instrumentalists who are accepted into the orchestra by competitive audition from throughout California. In addition to the heavy rehearsal schedule, the young musicians participate in an academic program on the Hidden Valley campus that includes instruction in music history, music theory and conducting. The summer orchestra program is currently in its 18th year.

For more information phone 659-3115.

Kiwanis rummage sale is Saturday

The Carmel Kiwanis Club will sponsor a rummage sale Saturday, Aug 22, at the Carmel High School gymnasium, Highway 1 and Ocean Ave. Doors open at 9:00 a.m.

It will be a buyer's bonanza, with stacks and racks of new merchandise donated by local merchants to be sold at big discounts — plus other good things galore, nearly new, old, and antique. Free parking is available at the school.

The sale benefits the Kiwanis Club's Community Service Fund. Last year 16 local charitable organizations received donations from the Carmel Kiwanians as part of the club's continuing community service activity. For more information phone 624-4887.

Symphony to hold auditions

Auditions for the Monterey County Symphony 1981-82 season will be held Friday, Aug. 28 and Saturday, Aug. 29 at the Carmel Sunset Center.

Applicants should bring a resume and be prepared to play a composition of their own choosing.

All interested musicians should phone the symphony office for an appointment at 624-8511.

Forest Service seeks volunteers

The Forest Service has activated a toll free "800" number for persons in California who wish to volunteer for service in the National Forests. The telephone will be monitored 24 hours a day in the Pacific Southwest Region headquarters in San Francisco, in an effort to place volunteers in all of the 17 national forests in the state.

Volunteers currently are providing excellent service as campground hosts, trail workers, interpretive specialists, clerical aides and field workers in a variety of disciplines including biology, archeology, geology and cartography. The Los Padres National Forest has several volunteers serving each of its five ranger districts.

People interested in working as a volunteer in any of the national forests in California may phone 800-792-0933. The volunteer program coordinator for the Los Padres National Forest is Jeff Saley. Jeff can be reached in care of the USDA Forest Service, 42 Aero Camino, Goleta, CA 93117, (805) 968-1578.

What's at the movies

American Werewolf In London: John Landis' film with many full moons, foggy moors, rotting corpses and howling werewolves. "The horror movie to end all horror movies." Rated R. At the Cinema 70.

Arthur: A comedy with Dudley Moore playing a happy millionaire drunk. Also with Liza Minnelli and John Gielgud. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Deadly Blessing: A psychological horror story. A woman is terrorized by unknown forces after her husband (a member of a religious sect) is murdered. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Divine Madness: Music, fun and madness with Bette Midler. Filmed at three live concerts performed in Santa Monica. Rated R. Fri. late show and Sat. afternoon show. At the Dream Theatre.

Escape From New York: New York City in 1997 is a giant penal colony ruled by its prisoners. No one who enters may leave the city. The plot centers around a mission to rescue the President of the United States, who is being held hostage inside the city. With Kurt Russell, Ernest Borgnine, Donald Pleasance and Isaac Hayes. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Eye of the Needle: A suspense adventure with Donald Sutherland as a Nazi spy in England during World War II, who has an ill-fated love affair with Kate Nelligan. Rated R. At the Dream Theatre.

First Monday in October: The story of the first woman justice in the Supreme Court, with Jill Clayburgh and Walter Matthau. Rated R. At the Carmel Village Theatre.

Heavy Metal: Animation and heavy metal rock music are combined with adventure stories about deep space and futuristic New York and beyond. Each story is dominated by the evil Loch-nar, a "glowing green sphere whose power infects all times, all galaxies, all dimensions." Music is by Black Sabbath, Blue Oyster Cult, Cheap Trick, Devo, Journey, Nazareth, Grand Funk Railroad and more. Rated R. At the Golden Bough Theatre.

Raiders of the Lost Ark: Written by George Lucas and directed by Steven Spielberg. Harrison Ford plays Indiana Jones, an archeologist and adventurer who somehow survives while his adversaries are impaled on steel spikes, poison darted, dispatched by an airplane propeller and even melted while competing to find the Ark of the Covenant. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A stereotype horror/science fiction movie about the sexual confusion of two normal teenagers and a tranvestite from another planet. Sat. midnight show. At the Dream Theatre.

Superman II: In this new adventure, Superman battles three outlaws from Krypton, who have his same super powers. The love story between Superman and Lois Lane also continues. Christopher Reeve is Superman, Margot Kidder is Lois Lane and Gene Hackman is villian Lex Luthor. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

This Is Elvis: The life of Elvis Presley is presented through documentary footage and by performances by actors Paul Boensch III, David Scott and John Harra as the rock and roll star from youngster to grown man. New York magazine claims the documentary footage of Elvis performing is "devastating." Rated PG. At the Hill Theatre.

Under the Rainbow: A comedy adventure about midgets and the movies. Carrie Fisher plays a movie studio talent coordinator and Chevy Chase plays a Secret Service agent. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Victory: During World War II, a group of war prisoners are matched against the Nazis in a game of soccer. The game is staged to illustrate the Nazis' athletic prowess, but the prisoners decide amongst themselves to use this time to escape. With Sylvester Stallone, Michael Caine, Max Von Sydow and Pele. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema.

The Wanderer: French surreal fantasy. Rated R. Sunday, 1 p.m. only. At the Dream Theatre.

Deaths

Ellen Ahern

Ellen G. Ahern of Carmel died at Community Hospital after a long illness. She was 54.

Mrs. Ahern moved to Carmel from San Francisco two years ago.

She served as president of the San Francisco League of Women Voters, 1961-63 and as president of the California League of Women Voters, 1967-69. Mrs. Ahern was also on the League's national board and a member of the Monterey Peninsula chapter.

In addition to her husband, John, she is survived by sons, Kevin B. of Del Mar and Richard Scott of San Francisco; and brothers, Ralph R. Gut of New York and Erwin M. Gut of Campinas, Brazil.

Memorial contributions may be made to the League of Women Voters Education Fund or the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Halsted & Co. of San Francisco was in charge of arrangements.

W.E. Crabtree

Warren E. Crabtree of Carmel, a retired college and high school teacher, died at Community Hospital after a long illness. He was 86.

Crabtree moved to Carmel in 1955; that same year he retired from teaching agriculture at Hartnell College and Salinas High School.

Survivors include his wife, Dora; son, David of Silverton, Ore.; daughter, Judith Richard of San Francisco; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Silverton chapter of the Future Farmers of America, Silverton, Ore. 97381, or to the charity of the donor's choice.

Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Paul Hamilton

Retired Army Col. Paul Hamilton died at Community Hospital after a brief illness. He was 80.

Col. Hamilton had been a Carmel resident for the past 20 years.

In 1956, he retired from the Army after 30 years of service.

A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Col. Hamilton was awarded the Bronze Star medal with oak leaf cluster, the Purple Heart, the Croix de Guerre of both Belgium and France, and the Cross of Lorraine.

He is survived by his wife, Eleanore; daughters, Anne Hudachek of Fort Carson, Colo., and Pauline H. Burn of Los Altos; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family suggested memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Daniel Clarey

Daniel A. Clarey, a former resident of Carmel Valley, died last week in Phoenix, Ariz. He was 41.

Clarey had been a Carmel Valley resident from 1949 until his recent move to Phoenix. He attended schools in Carmel Valley and Monterey High School.

Survivors include his wife, Paula; a son, Daniel of Seaside; father, Clifford of La Grange; brothers, Richard of Seaside and Bruce of Milpitas; and a sister, Judy Velasquez of Marina.

Chapel of the Chimes Mortuary in Phoenix was in charge of arrangements.

Ecumenical prayer service planned

An ecumenical prayer service for the people of countries where human rights are denied, especially in Central America, will be held Tuesday, Aug. 25, at 7:30 p.m. in St. Angela's Church, Lighthouse and Ninth avenues, Pacific Grove.

The purpose of the service is to pray that God will grant wisdom to the leaders of the world, especially those of our own country, so that they will be able to lead their people toward peace, brotherhood and the bringing about of God's kingdom, and to remind people, including leaders, that the world belongs to God and that people are stewards of the Lord.

The public is invited to participate in this prayer service, which has been planned by Jewish, Episcopalian and Catholic clergymen.

For further information phone 372-0224.

Father Farrell's wisdom

Speak with kindness or shut up

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Club
Aug. 12, 1981

Oh Lord, some days when the sun is shining and the world glows, we feel wonderfully well and it is easy to be kind. On other days it is cold and foggy, and we feel miserable and everyone seems ugly, cruel and selfish, especially those closest to us.

We know we can hurt them by the words we say or leave unsaid. We know that their needs are many and that everything they do is all tangled up in a web of their own weaving.

This is the time of the real test. This is when we should say the right word at the right moment, when we should reach out with sympathy. If we are down in the dumps and feeling sorry for ourselves the sure cure is to speak with kindness.

If we find that impossible, at least, Lord, help us to hold "our whisht" which is a Gaelic expression meaning "to shut up." Amen.

Youth group plans car wash

A car wash will be sponsored by the St. Philips Lutheran Church youth group Sunday, Aug. 23, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the church on Carmel Valley Road, four miles east of Highway 1.

Donations of 50¢, $1 and up will be accepted.

For more information phone Harry Clark, 625-5944.

WHEN THE BULL DANCES WITH THE BEAR IS IT A DANGER? OR AN OPPORTUNITY?

At Vintage Realty, we feel the current uncertainty is an opportunity.

Those things that have increased Carmel prices so dramatically in the last six years still exist, and will continue to exist.

We invite you to stop by and explore further the idea of investing in Carmel.

When the Bull & Bear stop dancing, you won't have missed the prom.

MEANWHILE, SOME OPPORTUNITIES

IMPECCABLE OCEAN VIEWS that can't be interrupted from this two-bedroom and two-bath beauty on Carmel's Scenic Road. Low maintenance, inside and out, with casual charm and elegance right where you've wanted to live. Owner financng available at $660,000.

CLOSE-TO-TOWN CONTEMPORARY design home is nearly new, and rich with the warmth of wood and wood tones, plus the sparkle of stained-glass windows for extra cheer. Many living possibilities in the four-bedroom design, coupled with the financing available, make an attractive offering at $329,500.

SOLD

BIG SUR ISOLATION attracts many. It's an independence of spirit. Those same people want a home they can redesign to make their own. This home in Sycamore Canyon offers over 7 acres, a two-bedroom, 1½-bath residence with interesting possibilities for country living, and abundant water at $190,000.

ANOTHER BIG SUR possibility is a lot in Palo Colorado Canyon. You can hear Rocky Creek from any point, and it's close enough to the Peninsula to commute. $51,500, and the owner will consider financing.

PACIFIC GROVE has a charm all its own, and this home fits. The large living room and three very large bedrooms all offer good living in a great location. Best of all, the owner is willing to finance at $215,000.

HEY BOSS! Sound good? Open your own shop in a 1,000-foot, high-traffic location in Carmel. $22,500 for level rent until 1984, with option. Windows!

LIKE BIG SUR in Carmel, you're so much part of nature. Two one-bedroom suites upstairs and a separate studio apartment downstairs, it is a very flexible living arrangement. Included are freeform decks, a marble barbecue with gas lighter, and a seven-pool waterfall. An interesting home, and the owners will carry the loan. $290,000.

CARMEL VALLEY SUNSHINE on over an acre of ground, with the best kind of outdoor living available in this three-bedroom plus den home. With a hot tub in a deck off the master suite and an ideal location for a pool you could spend a day just swimming or tubbing and listening to the quiet. Sunny kitchen, warm and inviting family room, all on an ideal setting near Carmel Valley Ranch. $395,000.

REMEMBER YOSEMITE? No crowds, no smog. Oakhurst still is the way Yosemite used to be. We have a 100-acre parcel with its own lake, A-frame cabin, and owner financing at $395,000.

3 BEDRMS., 3 BATHS, TOP LOCATION, $389,500

This beautifully built and maintained home is on a corner lot, South of Ocean, six blocks to town or beach. Two-room guest suite with bath has a separate entrance. Large fireplace in beam-ceiling living room. Enclosed patio has built-in BBQ. Easy-care garden. Huge master bedroom. The house has a feeling of privacy and space, unusual in a Carmel home. Outstanding value.

ROCKY CREEK RANCH— BREATH-TAKING VIEWS—OVER 600 ACRES, SOUTH OF CARMEL

On a clear day you can see forever (almost). The ocean view goes north past Santa Cruz! There are fine, closer ocean views of Bixby Creek Bridge and Division Knoll, and beautiful views of the mountains all around. A good portion of the property is either almost flat or gently sloping; some of it is quite steep. The vegetation is outstanding—groves of Redwoods, huge Oak trees, areas of Chaparral, Madrone, Manzanita and Grease Wood. Rocky Creek touches one corner of the property. There are perhaps dozens of large, practically level building sites on this magnificent acreage, one being an over 100-acre meadow. All this and much, much more is yours for $2,000,000. The owner will finance with terms open to negotiation.

PEBBLE BEACH LOT

Adjoining the 11th Fairway of Pebble Beach Golf Course. A 1.56-acre building site with views from Carmel Bay to Pescadero Point. Located on a private road just inside the Carmel gate. $379,500.

NEW, TWO BEDRMS, TWO BATHS, NEAR TOWN

This one-level home on Ninth near Torres is just three blocks south of Ocean Ave. The floor plan is excellent, and the quality of construction is superb. Generous-sized rooms throughout. Excellent, quiet neighborhood. Reasonably priced at $265,000.

ON TOP OF THE WORLD IN BIG SUR

This rustic, two-story cabin is located atop Long Ridge above the fog at 3,000 feet and has spectacular 360° views of the Ventana Wilderness, Pico Blanco and the ocean. The steep, winding dirt road assures privacy and is definitely not for the timid or faint-hearted. On just under 10 acres, the house has two bedrooms, one bath, a nicely finished redwood interior with river rock fireplace and a thick cedar shake exterior. Offered at $185,000.

4 BEDRM., 3 BATHS, 2 LOTS, BLOCK TO BEACH

This large, white Colonial-style home with ocean view is one of Carmel's landmarks. It is in immaculate condition. The 17'x28' living room and 14'x17' dining room give a true feeling of gracious living. There are two protected patios, a greenhouse and a beautiful garden. Over 400 square feet of finished basement rooms are good for workshop, hobby rooms, office, studio, etc. At $575,000 this HAS to be the best buy in the upper-middle price range.

CARMEL LOT, SOUTH OF OCEAN, $125,000

The lot is level, it ix 60' x 100', there are some oaks, but the building site is clear. It is about six blocks to either the Carmel beach or the State beach.

NEW, TWO BEDRM. HOME TWO BLOCKS TO TOWN

South of Ocean, too. The house has a den, which can be a third bedroom, two baths, a large entry hall and a very large deck. It was designed by architect Mackenzie Patterson, and it's a beautifully created and appointed home. La Honda redwood has been generously used, the doors are panelled and tastefully finished, the kitchen has ceramic tile floors and a Jenn-air range and oven. The dining area has skylights and a built-in buffet. Attached garage with Genie door opener, separate laundry room, tub AND shower in master bath. We're proud to offer this home at $375,000.

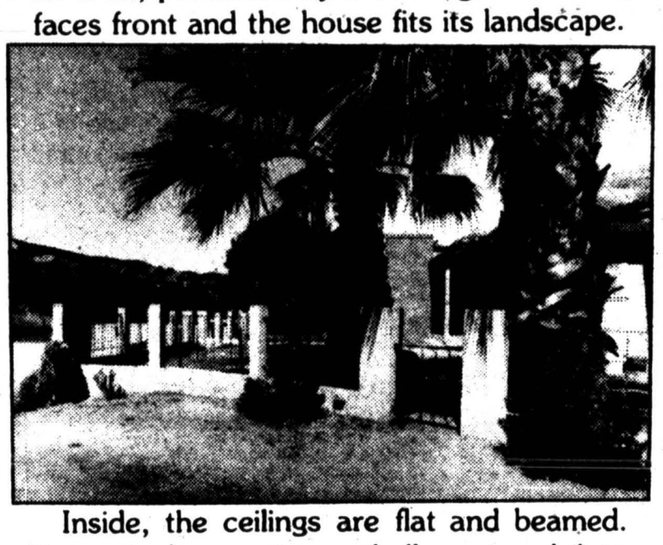
CHRISTOPHER BOCK

REAL ESTATE

An Almost Tropical Little Ranch

Just driving out San Benancio Canyon is an experience in relaxation. The road winds purposefully between high hills, occasional Grand Canyon-like buttresses catch your eye, a few horses graze comfortably on the hillsides, attractive homes appear around every curve.

About 3 miles off Highway 68, you come to No. 291, a sand-colored house with low hip roof, set well back from the road, slightly elevated in this great bowl in the hills. Two palm trees mark the gate, and a flowering magnolia shades one corner. A private pool, 35 x 18, protected by a curving block wall, faces front and the house fits its landscape.



Inside, the ceilings are flat and beamed. From the large entrance hall you turn left to the spacious living room, paneled on 2 sides, with picture windows overlooking the pool and the hills. A long deck runs the depth of the house on the north and ends in a lookout above the pool.

There are 4 bedrooms in all, 3 in the main house and the 4th in an almost-separate guest suite. The master bedroom is at the northeast corner, paneled, with one wall of mirrors and access to the deck. Two others lie at ends of an inner corridor, and an enormous carpeted bath is in between.

On the other side of the entry hall is the kitchen. It's floored with ceramic tile, all appliances are in place, a corner window over the sink looks to the hills.

Beyond this and down 2 steps is a family room with windows at front and rear and a charming free-standing fireplace. On its other side is the 4th bedroom, paneled, windowed, and with a most ingenious bath. What appears to be 3 louvred closets on the far wall is revealed as (1) a comfortable lavatory, (2) a glassed-in shower, and (3) a private commode. And this guest suite has its own entrance.

The whole property is one acre. At the rear is a barn with stalls for 3 horses and a tack room. The property has its own well and water system, completely redone within the past 18 months. It's 15 miles from Monterey, about the same from Carmel, 9 from Salinas. If you think this is "roughing it", prepare to be pampered! $240.000.

VICTROLA IS PURCHASED

Though still somewhat short of the amount required to purchase the Victrola for Sunset School, the committee having the matter in charge decided last week to purchase the machine, and the splendid instrument is now here.

The house of Sherman and Clay has made generous terms for the payment to them of the balance due.

The committee is still in need of $20, and is depending upon those who have not yet contributed to make up this deficiency.

POSSE SEARCHES FOR LOST BOY

A posse comprised of Boy Scouts, soldiers of the Monterey presidio and Carmel residents, began Wednesday night a search through all the hills for Norman Lyons, nine-year-old Pasadena school boy who mysteriously disappeared on Ocean Avenue.

Norman arrived in Carmel on Wednesday with his mother, Ruth Lyons of 1054 Armada Drive, Pasadena, who for many years lived in Carmel and went to school here.

At Ocean near Lincoln, Norman and his brother, Robert, and Mrs. Lyons got out of the parked car. While Mrs. Lyons became engaged in a conversation with another friend, Norman apparently wandered away alone leaving his other brother looking at a store window. When Mrs. Lyons turned around the boy was missing.

PRES. EISENHOWER TO VISIT CARMEL

President Eisenhower will arrive on the Monterey Peninsula sometime between 10 and 12 tonght. He will board a special train on a siding at the Cow Palace near San Francisco, where they are holding the Republican Convention, after his speech accepting his nomination to run for a second term as the Republican candidate.

During his weekend stay on the Peninsula, Mr. Eisenhower will live at the Cypress Point Country Club, which has been turned over for his exclusive use, and play golf on the Cypress course. Mayor Horace Lyon received a letter this week acknowledging the City Council's offer of the hospitality of Carmel to Mr. Eisenhower. The letter is signed by the president himself, to everybody's intense excitement, and Councilman John Chitwood has taken the stand that this letter cannot be regarded as a personal possession but belongs to the city and should be framed and hung in the council chambers.

WORLD'S LARGEST GERANIUM PLANT?

"It could be the world's largest potted geranium. It's got to be the largest in Carmel."

That's how Frank Potter, manager of the Wayside Inn at Mission and Seventh, describes his pride and joy, a nine-foot six-inch geranium growing out of a 10 inch pot.

"Really," he offers, "no one has ever seen the likes of it. It's a great tourist attraction. They all want to know what I do to make it grow like that. But I don't feed it anything, just water it once a week."

Potter plans to hack it down to normal size because the giant growth blocks the "no vacancy" sign at the Wayside.

NEW SPECIES OF SANDPIPER FOUND AT MOUTH OF CARMEL RIVER

A bird species new to Monterey County was discovered at the mouth of the Carmel River last week. While investigating the potential of the river mouth for a shortbird-banding project, Arthur Wang of Carmel Valley found a Stilt Sandpiper feeding on the mud in the river bed between the lagoon and the sewage treatment plant.

This species is almost unknown in northern California. It breeds in the Arctic tundra and winters in South America.

WOODCUTS PROVE TO BE HARD WORK

Many people visualize an artist's life as a romantic, leisurely existence. But to Gordon Mortensen, a newcomer to the Carmel area, it is a full-time job. And not an easy one at that.

"It's a very unstable way of life," says Mortensen, who specializes in woodcut printing. "It is a slow field to break into, but by entering art shows, winning prizes, and gaining the attention of galleries across the country, I think I'm finally making it."

Each of Mortensen's prints is an intricate masterpiece of carving technique and color combination. They depict delicate scenes of rolling hills, meadows, silhouetted trees and reflections.

CUSD ENROLLMENT DROPS

Enrollment in the Carmel Unified School District is predicted to drop 40 students for the 1976-1977 year, but according to assistant superintendent Dr. Robert Whitehead, the number of students will stay about the same in the next few years with enrollment leveling off. Total enrollment is expected to be 3,109 students.
